

STEWARTTOWN

Honour Bridal Couple
At Shower in Hall

There was a large and happy gathering in the school last Friday evening in honor of Jeannine Humphreys and Morris Cook. Rev. J. E. Maxwell was chairman and called on Mrs. Herb Reid for selections on her piano accordion, which she gave generously, and then came more to lead in community singing. Two solos by Barbara Cunningham were enjoyed, accompanied by Mrs. Hector Bird. Ruth McBride favoured with two piano solos. Mrs. Bird led in community singing. Jeannine and Morris were called to the front to receive their gifts. There were many of them — useful and beautiful. Assisting with the gifts were Evalonne Smith, Lois Bessey and Lois Mileham. Lunch was served by the committee. Mrs. Mileham, Mrs. Bessey, Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Hodge. Jeannine and Morris will have many things in their new home to remind them of Stewarttown friends and all their friends there. We wish them all happiness in their married life. Mrs. Lawson spent the week end with her daughter, Mrs. J. Hunter and Mr. Hunter, at Norval.

Former Georgetowner
Injured at Edmonton

Employed in Edmonton, Alberta, with a chemical company, a former Georgetowner, Albert Kemshead was seriously injured in an accident the week before last. "Abbie" well-remembered here as a hockey player, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Kemshead of town and has lived out west for several years. In the accident his right foot was fractured in three places and his left foot in one. The fact that he was wearing heavy work boots saved him from worse injury. He is a patient at present in Royal Alexandra Hospital in Edmonton.

Drive Architects Crazy

the automatic washer and dryer in the kitchen and she did have confidence in my ideas.

Only once, when the house was partly finished, did I take her out to see it. She asked me, "Did the roof look like that in the plans?" I said, "Yes," and that was that. When she moved in even the drapes had been hung and the broadloom laid.

Dirt Stays Put

The house has five bedrooms. It is built on a split level which saves my wife many steps. In the centre is a large entrance hall running right through the house. In one wing is the combined living, dining and kitchen area. In the other wing, up a short flight of stairs, are three bedrooms and the bathroom. Down a few steps is a basement providing two spare bedrooms and a storage room.

The open floor plan of the living, dining and kitchen area saves work. Instead of the twelve corners to clean, my wife has only six. She doesn't feel isolated from the guests or the rest of the family when working there. The washer and dryer in the kitchen are so modern and well designed they are not unsightly in this area. The entire kitchen is tiled which is easily wiped off. The light from the big windows makes it a pleasant place to work in.

"With these big windows I can always see when the place is dirty," Cecile claims. Besides this, radiant heating doesn't circulate the dirt the way other forms of heating do. The house is built on a concrete slab with radiant-heating pipes laid in concrete. The entire floor has been overlaid with tile or broadloom, saving my wife many woman hours of cleaning.

I saved money on plastering by using wood and brick for all the walls except those in the bedrooms, which are papered. The marble floor in the entrance hall while admittedly expensive (though I got it at a bargain) is practically indestructible. The children have spilled paints and crushed crayons on it and it shows no wear. Besides providing us with a bright, spacious entrance, it provides the twins with an excellent place to play.

There is no need for screen doors, which are an eyesore, because beside the door I have installed screened louvered panels which can be opened for excellent ventilation. Another convenience is the extra washbasin in an alcove just outside the bathroom. There are no curtains that have to be washed anywhere in the house. The full-length drapes give us all the privacy we need in the living area.

One of the biggest expenses in the construction of this house was two thousand dollars for glass windows, but my house is so light that I can take a photograph inside without any extra light. In fact we've noticed that our two youngest children, Pierrette and Paulette, become unconsciously depressed when they visit other homes which are darker.

One expense I cut out was a heated garage. As the car sits outside for eight or ten hours a day while I'm at work, I reasoned, why should it be pampered at night? Let into the centre of the house is a carport I can drive right into and step out by my front door. I don't have to get out in the snow in winter and the car is protected from the weather. In summer we use this carport as a shaded terrace.

The property had a lot of trees, birch and oak, and I left them there. Left in its natural state the lot makes a perfect place for the children to play. I have a small patch of grass at the back just big enough to accommodate a hammock and deck chairs, and the only other lawn is in front.

How does my wife like living in this house?

Too well. I've got an idea for another house I'd like to build some day that would be even more convenient for her. You'd think, now I've proved my point, that she would be delighted at the prospect of moving into an even better house, but every time I bring up the subject, she gently changes the conversation.

You can push even an architect's wife only so far.

—Now is the time to start planning your exhibits for Georgetowner Fall Fair, Friday and Saturday, October 1st and 2nd. Watch for excellent special prices.

On School Reports

Dear Mr. Biehn:
I would like to express appreciation to you for the full and interesting manner that the school results have been published this year. As everyone knows who has a child in school, the reports are eagerly watched for, and this year is the best yet. Thanks to you.
Yours truly,
A Herald Reader
