Father Was Norval Blacksmith Years Ago

A man whose father was a blacksmith in Norval's early days, Jefferson Adam Harper, was buried there on Saturday in Hillcrest Cemetery.

Mr. Harper, whose only survivor is a brother John R. Harper, had lived in Toronto for many years. He died at his home, 14 Albany Ave. on Thursday. His wife, who predeceased him, was the former Harriett Louise Thompson.

His father operated a blacksmith business in Norval which later was conducted by the late George Day, and the Harper family lived at that time in the house now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Lindner.
