Announce Staff Changes At Ont. Agricultural College

Prof. R. G. Knox, head of the department of animal husbandry at the Ontario College of Agriculture since 1938 will retire October 6th.

Widely known for his livestock research finding, Prof. Knox will be succeeded by Prof. George E. Raithby, a senior professor in the department for several years.

Prof. Knox gained wide recognition for his pioneer effort in drawing up the country's first artificial insemination program in 1938. Under his leadership, too, the Arjell Farm at OAC was established for livestock research.

A member of the OAC staff since 1922, Prof. Raithby has served as supervisor of the college's herd program and headed the horse program on the farm. He is also a member of several livestock boards.

OAC President Dr. J. D. MacLachlan has also announced that Prof. E. C. McLean will succeed Dr. G. E. Rouman as head of the English department, and Prof. F. H. Montgomery becomes head of the botany department, succeeding Dr. R. O. Hibbey.

James Sprowl Dies Long Township Farmer

A native of Esqueving township, James Sprowl, 86, died suddenly at his home on September 8. He was born in 1867, the son of John Sprowl and Jane Cummings. He attended Dublin school as a lad and in 1894 was married in Erin. His wife predeceased him in 1950. A daughter, Viola and son Errol remain.

A farmer, he lived at his late home in Esqueving for the past 42 years.

Rev. E. A. Curry conducted the funeral service at the Victor Humley & Son funeral home, Acton. Pallbearers were neighbours, G. Johnson, A. Villemaire, J. Morrison, J. Black, W. McIntyre and W. Britton.

Flower bearers were nephews, M. Allen, T. Allen, K. Allen, R. Johnson, C. Sprowl and C. Denny.

Interment was in Fairview cemetery, Acton.

Ask Township Approval Pool 3 Phone Exchanges

Representatives of Esqueving and Nassagaweya townships met with members of the North Halton Urban Board in Milton last week to consider the suggested extension of telephone service by an amalgamation of the Milton, Acton and Georgetown exchanges.

Chairman Jack Armstrong explained to Walter Linham for Esqueving and Arthur Service for Nassagaweya that the urban municipalities had already favoured the taking of a poll vote among subscribers to determine their reaction.

It was further explained that before the new plan of extended service could be put into effect an 85 per cent majority of the subscribers must favour the move.

The extended service would increase the rates approximately 29 cents per month on private lines, according to official Bell estimates. Back of the thinking of members of the Board in promoting the idea was the greater ease in ringing through fire alarms, police calls and other emergency services.

Extension of the service would eliminate toll charges between any of these three centres, it was explained. Township representatives agreed to present the matter to their councils and receive resolutions favouring the vote if the councils were agreeable.

The Board secretary, J. McGeachie, was instructed to investigate and determine whether the 85 per cent majority was of votes cast or of total subscribers.

Information on the possibility of having a booth at the Trade Fair to promote North Halton industrially was presented. A minimum size area would be 10 feet by 12 feet at $2.50 a square foot. The preparation of the booth would be considered additional expense. The matter was to be considered further when more information was available and the financial situation of the board was reviewed.

James Dills, representing the Dills Printing and Publishing Co., submitted suggestions and prices on the preparation of a promotional brochure embodying a detailed map of the North Halton area and other necessary information, as requested by the Board. A committee was to meet at the next meeting to consider the information that should be included in the folder.

Councillor Doug Sargeant, Georgetown, suggested members should consider an interchange of information on industrial sites available so that if one town was unable to satisfy an investigating industrialist, the facilities of one of the other North Halton towns could be offered. This plan was endorsed as members pointing out the value to the area as a whole to have the effects of the industry in North Halton.

CCF Picnicers Hear Former Ontario MPP

Those attending the Halton CCF Association picnic on September 11, heard speeches by William Temple, Toronto, a former member of the Ontario legislature and Stan Allen, Georgetown, CCF candidate in the next provincial election.

The annual picnic was held at The Breezes, an attractive picnic spot just west of Acton. There was baseball, races for the children and a picnic supper.

Mr. Temple, who defeated George Drew to win a seat in the legislature in 1948 said that main problems today are unemployment and the periodic failure of our economic system. If these problems are ever to be solved, he said, it is necessary to elect men like Stan Allen, representing a party like the CCF, in sufficient numbers to become the government of the province and of the country.

Mr. Allen stated that this winter will expose the kind of government Ontario has been putting up with for the last few years. He feels that unemployment during the coming season will be worse than it has been since depression days. The farmer, he said, is paying more for goods and getting less for his produce than at any time since the war. In the face of those problems, the government has showed a deplorable lack of policy.

It is time that a government is placed in power whose policies are formulated at conventions by the ordinary people of the province, said Mr. Allen.
