Hobbies that Pay

We wonder if Mrs. M. H. Moyer and the ance, for exhibition and for sale. small group of ladies who formed the Arts & Crafts of Georgetown several years ago had town.

Certainly a stranger attending the annual exhibition and sale on Saturday would be impressed by the variety of articles which have become hobbies with Georgetown women.

Georgetown is well to the fore in the rebirth of craft work in Ontario. Pottery. leatherwork, weaving . . . delicate shell jewellery, puppets, hammered aluminum . . painting, silver filigree . . . were there in abund-

Thanks to Provincial Paper

Best news of the week is the possibility that the unsightly stream which flows through town will be cleaned up if Provincial Paper, Ltd. goes ahead with plans to find another method of disposing of mill waste.

As long as most Georgetowners can remember, our only local "river" has been scarcely a thing of beauty, except to admire its changing hues.

For years, the papermill has dumped a stream, with colours varying from day to day according to what colour of coating is being applied to the paper in production. The waste does not menace health, but it does offend the nostrils on occasion, and it precludes any use of the stream for bathing or boating.

Talk of damming a portion of the stream a few years ago to create a natural swimming pool came to nothing when it was realized that there could be no swimming until the mill changed its system. Any idea of beautifying the Lawson Park flats always hit the stumbling block of the coloured water.

And it is particularly nice to know that mixture of waste clay and casein into the one of Georgetown's large industries thinks enough of the town to initiate action on its own, for there has been no particular public pressure for the move.

Georgetown can certainly count herself fortunate to be sitting so near the disaster scene while suffering no major damage from floods. Perhaps it is this nearness to tragedy that has touched so many hearts and made donations both numerous and generous. Let us hope that every person in town will ex-

which will be fowarded to Toronto for distri-

The Hurricane Fund

With donations still coming in steadily for the Ontario Hurricane Relief Fund, the Georgetown total shows signs of being the biggest single financial effort ever made here.

Last week we editorialized early that the fund was well over $2000, to find our front page copy written two days later, revealing over $4,000 already banked. Now again, as we write an early editorial, it is safe to say that the fund is over $5,000, while hoping that we will be as far wrong again by Wednesday.
