

PHONE LINES RING FOR HOCKEY SCORE

Art Scott believes even more in the power of Herald advertising after last week-end.

Conceiving the idea of a phone service for results of the hockey game in Sundridge, this local car dealer used a small space in last week's Herald to tell people about it.

Result... the two phone lines at the garage rang steadily all evening with the last call coming about 1.00 p.m.

Mrs. Scott and their daughter Sandra, who manned the phones, estimated that over six hundred calls were received. And as an extra bonus to their advertising, the phone started ringing again Sunday morning and several calls came in then too.

FARM NEWS

Agriculture Revolution During Quarter Century

J. E. W. When we visited the farm of Harvey Nurse at Ashgrove this past week, we couldn't help but wonder "What would my dad and others of his generation think if they could come back and see what has taken place in Agriculture in the past 25 or 30 years?" They were of the generation who in their youth had swung the cradle— who later had followed the reaper— and then came the unbelievable day of the self-binder. They started out in the days when the flail was the medium of threshing out the grain—the became the threshing unit powered by horses. Even we can remember the old steam engine which in our youth seemed to require "an awful lot of water" to be pumped from the creek, and the piles of rails for fuel—and the separator with its feeding table, where two men used to stand, one to cut bands and the other to feed—and the carriers which conveyed the straw out to the men on the stack. Those were the days, when they really built stacks. However, to get back to the Harvey Nurse farm, what did we see that startled us so much?

Well, really nothing that we had not seen elsewhere, but here it was in Halton County, and on the farm of a "dirt" farmer. He has a farm of 200 acres, carrying between 35 and 40 milking cows. The old wooden stable was totally inadequate to cope with an enterprise of this scope, so rather than rip out the old stable and put in steel, which would cost plenty in these days, Harvey has erected a loading barn 40x70 with laminated rafters—in one end is a milking parlour which will handle four cows at a clip and the milk will go direct through glass piping to one of those much maligned bulk coolers.

Earlier in the week, we had attended a meeting of the directors of Halton Milk Producers, and there we heard Irwin Hartley of Oxford County, newly elected president of the Toronto Milk Producers, and others comment on "bulk coolers" and tank trucks, etc. From their comments, it definitely looks, that whether we like it or not, bulk hauling is on the way. We question if Harvey is any more in favour of it than the rest of us, but he had to have a new milk house, so decided he might just as well put in the bulk cooler when he was at it, and he readily when bulk hauling can't be stalled off any longer. Certainly, to one of our vintage, his set-up looks like a real labour saver. We know that many Halton dairymen will want to see the set-up on the Harvey Nurse farm, so with Harvey's approval, we plan to make his farm one of the two to be visited when we hold the annual meeting of Halton's three D.H.I.A. groups, on Monday, March 28th.

NORVAL

Musical Concert by Norval School Pupils

Norval Public School held their annual spring concert in the Anglican Church Hall on Monday, March 14th. There was an excellent attendance of parents and the hall was filled to capacity.

In his introductory remarks, Mr. Copeland welcomed the parents and explained that the concert was in part a preparation for the Festival at the end of the month. One of the aims of the concert was to give the children confidence in facing a large audience. The programme represented the choral and individual work of all grades.

After the singing of "Oh Canada," by the school choir the concert opened with Rhythm Band numbers, ably conducted by Linda Shea of Grade 1, songs and choral readings by Grades 1 and 2. The Junior Grades then presented some solo numbers and the Junior Choir sang: "The Way to London Town."

Some comic relief was provided by the square dancing of the Senior Room. Pupils in costume representing grandmas, grandpas, and the hired man, etc. One topical feature of the evening's entertainment was the Irish selections. This included the square dance, "The Wearing of the Green," very nicely executed by Intermediate room pupils, dressed suitably in green costumes, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," by Nancy Graeb, "Did Your Mother Come From Ireland?" by Bonnie McMeekin and a guitar solo by Don Murray. Among the numbers rendered by the Senior Choir were the Forty Second Psalm, "Now the Moon is Shining" and "Early one Morning."

Mr. Copeland is to be complimented on his choral numbers and without wishing to detract in any way from the fine performance given by all pupils, special mention should be made of the choral rendering of a "Vesper Hymn" by Grades 3, 4 and 5 and of the very fine singing by Joyce McLean of "Believe me if all those endearing young charms" which was one of the highlights of the evening's entertainment. The evening ended with the singing of the Queen by the school choir. In his closing speech, Mr. Copeland thanked the parents and children for their cooperation and he had a special word of thanks for the help given him by the teachers, Mrs. Cascarden, Miss Carson and Mr. Crawford Douglas, who assisted at the piano. He also complimented Mrs. Stamp for the fine costumes she had made for the children. On the whole, Norval Public School could be proud of their concert which must have meant a great deal of hard work for all concerned.
