Mill Union Protests Remarks by Councillors

The air was cleared in council chambers Monday, if not in the Alliance parish hall district, when a delegation of union representatives appeared to protest statements made by councillors last week in a council discussion of odours from the company's mill waste.

An apology for his statement that the mill should leave town if they cannot operate without a stench by Cr. Walter Gray, and explanation by Cr. Stan Allen that he had been somewhat misquoted in his statements about mill wages were accepted by the delegation as evidence that council, collectively or individually would be concerned at any thought of the mill leaving town.

"Councillors are human and tempers fly here as well as anywhere else," said Stan Allen, explaining that while he is still interested in seeking a remedy to overcome the odour, it is not his intention to see the mill closed or any worker hurt.

Tom Hill, union president, introduced the delegation which included William Engleby, honorary president, and vice president, Bel Majeury, and several other members.

Mr. Engleby, acting as spokesman said statements made about mill wages were false and that while there is an obnoxious odour, people had built in the district knowing it was so.

"It doesn't do any of us any good to see such statements in the press," he said. "The company is trying to do something about controlling the odour and it will be solved in time."

Mayor Armstrong read a letter from Cr. Walter Gray, who explained that out-of-town business made it impossible for him to attend the meeting.

Since last week, said Mr. Gray in his letter, he had received information about the cost involved and in his opinion the cost is too great for him to pass remarks.

"I withdraw my remarks," he continued, "and at no time would I support any measure to exert pressure on any industry for such an expenditure with no revenue. I have faith that the Alliance management will do justice to the problem as soon as they find it possible to do so."

Mr. Engleby suggested that council talk with the mill management.

"Last Monday we had a delegation of residents here and no one disagrees that there is an odour," explained Mayor Armstrong. "The problem is to find a remedy and council decided to ask the town engineer to analyze the waste and see if he could help find a solution. I'm of the firm belief that the mill management is doing its best and will continue to do its best to find a solution. No action has ever been taken by council against the mill and I don't think any council will be ever doing so."

Alex Taylor, a delegation member, reminded council that the mill has been here a long time and employs 200 people and nothing should be done to jeopardize the employees' position.

Mr. Hill said there is no bluff attached if a company considers closing a mill. Closing of the old lower mill of Provincial showed what can happen, he said.

"The smell has been there for years, as stated," said Reeve Allen, "and when the mill took action there was no kick for 4 or 5 years. Now, because of complaints from the Conservation Commission, they have been forced to build dams and I receive complaints from people who never smelled it before. My complaint isn't entirely against the mill. It's also against the council of that day and the engineer who said our sewerage system would take care of mill waste."

Mr. Allen, who is a former president of Smith and Stone union, said it is certainly not his intention to take any action which would be harmful to the working man for whom he has always fought.

"There has been no thought at any time of the mill leaving town," said Cr. Garfield McGillivray. "I haven't the answer to end the odour, but I think cooperation between mill and town engineers will get somewhere."

Mayor Armstrong thanked the delegation for taking an interest in an item of importance.

"Everyone is trying to do their best and I think the solution will be found," he said as the discussion concluded.

Local Man Saves Boy from Drowning

A York Township boy owes his life to a Georgetown man, Archie McGillivray, 2 River Drive, who saved him from drowning in a gravel pit pool Monday night.

Vacationing with his family on the Ambrose McCormick farm at Caledon, 15-year-old Pat Harris, son of John J. Harris, 716 Jane Street, Toronto, was bathing in a shallow pool formed in a gravel pit and slid into a deep slot.

Some other youngsters who were with him ran to tell Mr. McGillivray, who was operating a power shovel nearby. He plunged, fully clothed into the water, and managed to drag him to safety. Artificial respiration was applied by Mike Elik and John Nesbitt of Orangeville.

Mr. McGillivray lost his wrist watch when he dived and a small amount of loose change in his pocket. His prompt action was responsible for saving young Harris' life.

Cooksville Edges Cotton's Teams Play Here Tuesday

Last Friday night in Cooksville, Cotton's were defeated 4-3 in the last half of the ninth in a thrilling ball game. Cotton's, who have lost two games this year, both to Cooksville were outlucked rather than outplayed. Poor base running cost them two runs.

With the game a scoreless tie in the last half of the fourth Cooksville scored three runs on three hits and an infield out. In the fifth inning Cotton's got one run back when Blake Ingalls singled and scored on Barrager's triple. Cotton's tied the game up in the sixth when Ingalls and Fenning singled, advancing a base on a pass ball, both scoring when Rene Martin doubled to left. In the eighth and ninth Cotton's had two chances to take the lead but Barrager left third too soon on an outfield fly and Martin missed home plate on the same kind of a play an inning later.

Cooksville won the game in the last of the ninth when with one out a single and a double put men on second and third and a fly to the outfield scored the winning run.

Next Tuesday night Cooksville and Cotton's play in Georgetown Park. Come out and see the first and second teams in action.

Batteries: Cotton's: Patterson and Chappel; Cooksville: Miller and Milne.

TWO FIRE CALLS TO SWIMMING POOL SITE

Burning brush at the community swimming pool site behind the arena brought firemen twice yesterday when the fire got out of control.

They extinguished a grass fire in mid-afternoon and at supper time a small prefab office, erected earlier in the day by contractors Milne & Nichols caught fire. There was minor damage to the building.

Plenty of Gas Now For Town: Seynuk

"We have more than enough natural gas to supply Georgetown and we can have gas piped to town in no time at all" said Anthony Seynuk, appearing before Georgetown council Monday to request a franchise for his company, Anthony Gas and Oil Explorations Ltd.

Mr. Seynuk, who was accompanied by Roy Magloughlen, another company official, said that even the smallest well on the McDonald property in the Scotch Block can supply the whole present town with its gas requirements.

His gas, he said, would be cheaper than any that could be supplied by companies piping it in from the U.S. Questioned as to whether he would be supplying Halton Natural Gas Co. which has also requested a franchise, Mr. Seynuk said he had never been approached by that company and had made no commitments to or with any company. Last Monday, council gave two readings to a by-law which would give Halton Natural Gas a franchise, subject to approval of the Ontario Fuel Board.

Mr. Seynuk detailed his long years of searching for gas.

Several Georgetown people invested in his project in the early thirties when he had drilled to 4,000 feet using makeshift equipment and stopped short of the gas supplies which now have been located.

"Every investor will get stock, dollar for dollar in the new company," he said.

Mayor Armstrong expressed council's interest in considering Mr. Seynuk's proposal before any final decision is made and suggested that the Anthony company interview the fuel board and then come back to council.

Reports of poison ivy on Ontario Street will be investigated and the weed eradicated when it is found.

A civic holiday will be proclaimed as usual in Georgetown the first Monday next month, August 1st.

Construction Starts on Georgetown's Community Swimming Pool

Construction has started on a $50,000 community swimming pool project which is being sparked by Georgetown Lions Club.

Toronto contractors Milne & Nichols have been awarded the contract and preliminary work is in progress behind the arena where the pool will be located.

A fund campaign has been launched and a total of $8,450 is in the bank as a start, with donations being solicited to raise this to at least $50,000.

The Lions procured the location and prepared plans and specifications, and they have been aided substantially by the fire department in clearing the land, by Don Ford who mowed grass and weeds and town engineer Douglas Wilson, who is doing the surveying.
