—Imperial Oil photo.

Six weekly newspapers were among a selection of Canadian publications placed in the cornerstone of Imperial Oil's new 19-storey office building in Toronto. Here G. L. Stewart (left), chairman of Imperial's board of directors, and J. R. White, company president, examine one of the weeklies before placing them in the copper box which was hermetically sealed and deposited in a special cavity in the three-ton cornerstone. Mr. Stewart laid the stone September 8, the 75th anniversary of the company's formation. The newspapers were part of a collection of Canadiana intended to inform some future generation about Canadian living habits in 1955. Another item was a "microfilm scrapbook" of some 150 clippings from various Canadian newspapers. Weekly newspapers chosen to be preserved in the cornerstone were the 1954 winners of Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association awards as best weeklies in their divisions.

Meetings have been held with interested people and district commissioner Mrs. S. E. Wood of Milton and the Division Commissioner Mrs. Robert Hoey, of Burlington, and plans have been formulated for a meeting of interested parents and daughters, to be held in the parish rooms at St. George's Anglican Church, Friday, November 4th.

The following programme has been arranged by the division and district commissioners.

Cheese Gaining Favour In Canadian Diet

"The only way to learn about cheese is to eat it" was the advice given many years ago by an English gourmet and authority on cheese. For hundreds of years before this sage advice, people the world over had been eating many different cheeses made from the milk of cows or goats. The ancients were quick to discover that the making of cheese allowed them, literally, to store and transport milk, thereby making it available to themselves at all times, the major food values of the liquid product. Not until comparatively modern times was dairy science able to explain in detail why cheese was so highly regarded, generation after generation.

Before food scientists got into the story of cheese, this product was prized both for taste and for its ability to sustain strength in the individual as he went about his daily chores. It was undoubtedly this characteristic that has made cheese so popular in workingmen's lunch boxes wherever heavy manual labour is required. The scientists have come up with the answer—cheese is ideal for all classes of workers because it is the most highly concentrated of the protein foods and as such, is inexpensive. Furthermore, 90 to 95 per cent of all cheese is digested. Nutritionists consider cheese among the best of protein foods even for very young children.

If the only way to learn about cheese is to eat it, as has been suggested, Canadians are gradually applying themselves to their cheese-eating lessons in greater and greater numbers. Back in 1950 we ate about 5 1/2 lbs. of cheese per capita while today the figure is edging up towards 6 1/2 lbs. Officials of the dairy industry hope this figure will move up beyond the quarter mark during this year's October Cheese Festival, which has been an annual event since 1940, grocery stores, hotels and restaurants have featured dozens of varieties of cheese which has resulted in a steadily expanding acceptance of cheese in its various forms by Canadian consumers.
