Halton, Peel Poultrymen Entertain City Fanciers

Georgetown & Halton County Poultry Association and the Brampton and Peel County group held a challenge night and social evening in Esqueping Community Hall, Stewarttown, on Friday. They were hosts to members of Greater Toronto Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association.
President Thomas Clark of the Georgetown club made the visitors welcome and started proceedings by getting a few tables of euchre underway.
Secretaries Bertram Dowding of Greater Toronto and Clarence Spence of Georgetown were official scorers for the judging. In standard poultry and bantams, Chris McKay was judge. Greater Toronto was short two entries and in the friendly competition, Georgetown and Brampton loaned them two birds and the competition ended in a tie.
Les Ridler judged pigeons and each side scored five firsts to also make a tie. Georgetown and Brampton were short on rabbits, so Greater Toronto repaid the favour and loaned some entries. Judge Roy Messervey scored Toronto slightly ahead in this division.
Secretary Don Ewles, of Brampton, presented bouquets of mums to Mrs. Spence, Mrs. Messervey and Mrs. Ridler, as well as to Mr. Clark and Mr. McKay, who came stage. Another bouquet was auctioned by Corey Herrington, raising a small sum of money for the host club.
Eighty guests sat down to lunch served by the Georgetown ladies. Lloyd Miller conducted a lucky draw during the evening. Winners were Roy Messervey, pair of bantams; Ed McLean, pair of dressed chickens; Ed Feather, dressed chicken; Mac Yates, bag of potatoes; Thomas Clark, bushel of turnips.
