Halton Co-Operative Enters Oil, Gas Business

Halton Co-operative Supplies is entering the gas and oil business next week, with purchase of a new truck which will be delivering gasoline, fuel oil and similar supplies.

Storage tanks have been installed behind the company's mill and sales office on Guelph St., as well as at the company's Milton depot.

The Co-Op is supplying round aluminium-painted tanks for farm customers, to store a product which has become so essential in farm operations. They are designed to cut evaporation loss as much as possible.

Decision of Co-Op directors to enter the oil and gas field was endorsed at the annual meeting of the organization recently at Stewarttown, when the new move was first made public by W. H. Smellie, general manager of the company which conducts business in Georgetown and Milton.

Georgetown council discussed engaging a firm of consulting engineers to plan a future new sewage disposal plant at their meeting on Monday.

Names of six possible firms were given by Douglas Wilson, town engineer, and the public works committee was empowered to go into the matter.

While no definite decision has been taken on a new plant, it is expected that when the industrial area of Delrex is built up, the present treatment plant will not be adequate to take care of the town's needs.

So sure is the Delrex company of this, that they are planning to spend some $40,000 in installing a pumping station at the edge of the industrial section, to be ready when the time comes.

Council was asked to approve this project Monday, their okay being necessary before the company can go through the necessary procedure with the Dept. of Health. Cr. Harry Hale explained that it would mean no money out of the town treasury.

Cr. LeRoy Dale said he could see no particular reason for the pump station at the present time, and that he would favour no talk about a new sewage disposal plant until he could see signs of industrial building in Delrex. He voted against the motion.

Engineer Wilson suggested that council consider some sort of by-law governing industrial waste disposal, in order to safeguard present or future sewage plants from trouble caused by toxic wastes.

Certain industries, such as packing plants, tanneries, plating or paper processing can play havoc with a sewerage system, he said, unless waste products are required to be pre-treated.

A policy has been adopted which will require property owners to pay charges of fixing stopped sewer lines if investigation proves that the stoppage is on private property.

Ray Berg asked about the possibility of opening Cherry St., which adjoins his property on Kennedy St. The engineer and road committee were instructed to ascertain costs of water and sewer services if this was done.

When Cr. Irwin Noble suggested that "U" turns on Main St. be prohibited, Cr. Alf Sykes said this was one of several recommendations made by the police chief which will be studied by the police committee and brought before council at a later date. Mr. Sykes said he had drawn to the chief's attention a letter sent to council by Dr. Charles Sayers about a dog-catching incident, and that the chief had dealt with the matter in a satisfactory manner.

An increase to 40% from the former 25% rebate from the county on road expenses was reported by Reeve Allen.

Tunnel Embankment For New Sewer Line

A major engineering project is underway, with the tunnelling of the CNR embankment behind the old shoe factory on John St. in preparation for hooking up the Swanek subdivision to the sewerage system.

At present Armo Drainage Co. is working two 12-hour shifts, 7 days a week, at this difficult job which entails boring through huge trees and other solid matter used for fill when the embankment was constructed a century ago.

Preparatory shoring work was done by Beaver Ready-Mixed Co. working under contract. Armo then contracted to bore a 24" hole for the sewer pipe, only to run into difficulties early in the job when a huge tree lay horizontal in the direct path of the boring machinery.

The company then agreed to construct a tunnel 44 inches in diameter, working on a per foot price basis for the approximate 176 feet of boring required.

Since starting the job some 3 feet a day progress has been made. In the 18 feet of tunnelling up to yesterday, Armo had tunnelled and blasted its way through 6 trees and two stumps, one a 15-inch cedar. Three men work on each shift, and material removed is brought out by a small car on a track. Dynamite is used to blast the trees.
