DAIRY FARMERS PLANNING OCTOBER CHEESE PROMOTION

Say "Cheese" is an expression normally used when photographers are having difficulty making their subjects smile. This October, however, the two words will be used in a different sense because dairy producers, cheese manufacturers and retailers right across Canada will be saying "cheese" to home-makers every shopping day of the thirty-one day month. They are hoping to boost cheese purchases in 1956 more than ever before. Dairy Farmers of Canada, the national dairy producer association, which is again spearheading the annual October Cheese Festival expects this year's festival will be instrumental in boosting cheese consumption close to the seven pound figure. Per capita consumption of cheese in 1948 was 4.84 lbs. Evidence that cheese will be on everyone's tongue during the promotion period is already apparent. In addition to the big advertising and merchandising push by the Canadian dairy group, cheese manufacturers, stores, hotels and restaurants have signified their intention of riding along with the campaign. Manufacturers of related foods too, are teaming up with Dairy Farmers of Canada. Such foods as potato chips, pickles, macaroni, spaghetti, bread and crackers are expected to be featured with cheese at the point-of-purchase in food stores and restaurants. "How many ways do you serve cheese?" will be a question posed to the homemaker through large space newspaper advertisements scheduled for October by Dairy Farmers of Canada. "Have you discovered its wonderful versatility... its way of blending so beautifully with great variety of foods. And for all its flavour goodness, it's rich in protein and calcium, and so economical," the advertisement continues. And then to make the reader really sit up and take notice, she will be invited to use cheese in many new exciting ways: as a sauce in macaroni with a sprinkling of Canadian Cheddar on top, in a barbecue chili stew, on top of apple pie with the cheese baked until softly melted and golden brown.

These new adventures with cheese will also be featured along with other recipes in two new recipe booklets prepared by the Dairy Foods Service Bureau, a division of Dairy Farmers of Canada. Marie Fraser, food editor of the bureau, will make her booklets available to consumers and dietitians free-of-charge on request. Other cheese recipes will be released in October to women's editors and commentators of press, radio and TV by the food editor and her staff.

The October Cheese Festival this year, is the sixth concentrated cheese drive by Dairy Farmers of Canada since the inception of the dairy foods advertising and public relations program by the Canadian dairy group in 1950. The Festival this year was "kicked-off" at the Old Mill in Toronto some time ago when the Government of On-
