Then & Now

Thirty Years Ago

THEN . . . Herald, Sept. 15, 1926
A pulpit chair was presented to Ashgrove United Church by descendants of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brownridge, who shared in the building of the church in 1860. A daughter, Mrs. William Irwin, Toronto, read the address and a grandson Thomas J. Brownridge unveiled the chair. Rev. J. W. Kitching officiated at the dedication.
Master Leslie Clark entertained at a corn roast at his home on John St. for a group of young friends.
The Rex Theatre was playing "The Million Dollar Handicap" from the novel "Thoroughbred" by a former Georgetown writer W. A. Fraser. . . 175 members from York District were welcomed by Worshipful Mistress McCreight when they visited the "True Blue Lodge." It was announced at the meeting that Sister Eva McNally had been appointed Associate Supreme Grand Lecturer and Bro. Earl McCreight DDGM. . . The United Church League held a corn roast at the armory. . . Harold Cleave received his Past DDGM collar at a meeting of Orion Odd Fellows Lodge. . . There was no business transacted at the September meeting of the public school board according to this brief meeting account in the Herald. . . Dr. R. K. Anderson was re-elected Liberal-Conservative M.P. with a majority of 2300, defeating W. J. L. Hampshire, the Liberal candidate. . . A. B. Parr and Ina Campbell were married.

NOW . . . September, 1956
Mrs. Irwin, now at an advanced age, is a resident of a Toronto nursing home. T. J. Brownridge and his family are still numbered among the congregation of the church at Ashgrove. . . Master Leslie helps to produce the weekly Herald and as linotypist has set the copy which you are reading. . . The Rex Theatre is now the Old Fellows Hall. . . Mr. and Mrs. McCreight moved to Windsor, where Mrs. McCreight died several years ago. . . School affairs have progressed to the point where there are several meetings each month, and there is no lack of business to transact as there was in those days. . . Dr. Anderson has been dead for several years. His opponent, later sheriff of the county, lives at R. R. 3, Milton. . . Bert Parr died earlier this year, after a long illness. They lived in Sudbury for some time, returning to town after he suffered a stroke, and Mrs. Parr is living on Queen Street.

Twenty Years Ago

THEN . . . Herald, Sept. 16, 1936
Many deaths of town and former residents were recorded in this issue of the Herald. They included Alfred I. Stull, 42. . . John Robinson Loree, 21, of Norval, who died of typhoid fever. . . Robert Apple, 58, a Stewarttown farmer. . . Miss Isabel Godfrey. . . and E. Y. Barracough, 61, owner of the Glen Woollen Mills. Mr. Barracough was prominent in municipal affairs. He had been high school board chairman, master of Credit Loans and a past DDGM, an elder in Union Presbyterian Church and member of Glen public school board and Esquesing board of health. John Isaac Duke, 53, a former town barber, died at Burlington. A Liberal-Conservative picnic in the park was a big event, with provincial leader Hon. Earl Rowe as chief speaker. . . Harvey Nurse placed second in the dominion rifle competitions in Montreal. Another member of Norval Rifle Club, R. W. Hall place 7th. . . A memorial service in Ballinacod Cemetery honoured the memory of Bishop Warne, who spent forty years in India with the Methodist Episcopal Church and was buried in his home cemetery. . .

NOW . . . September, 1956
The Glen Woollen Mills changed ownership several times, was finally closed down and the building was occupied by a feather converting firm when it was destroyed by fire. Mrs. Barracough continues to live in the large house which looks down on the building. . . It's many a day since Georgetown has had a political picnic. Hon. Earl Rowe's Conservative party, now led by Premier Leslie Frost, has had an upturn of fortune and is firmly entrenched at present at Queen's Park. . . The Norval Rifle Club has passed out of existence, but recently a group of district men have formed a revolver club which is providing good sport for its members.

Ten Years Ago

THEN . . . Herald, Sept. 11, 1946
A memorial pylon was dedicated by J. A. Carroll, fall fairs superintendent, marking the centennial celebration of Georgetown Fair. The flag was raised by Mayor Harold Cleave and W. A. Wilson, a former president and secretary — Georgetown Manufacturing Co., established by Vic Diggins, started operations in the old O'Neill block on Main Street. . . A Georgetown barber, Frank Golden, 58, died. . . The town works staff was boosted to four men when Jack Kerr was hired. . . Georgetown a holdout for some months, was the last Halton municipality to adopt the county assessing system. . . Mrs. James Curtis, who died in Barrie, was buried here. Her husband was Singer Sewing representative when they lived in town. . . John Tapp and Jean Knowlton were married in Brockville. . . Helen Meredith and Emmanuel Kern were married in Acton United Church, and took up the residence in Limehouse. . . Miss Ismay Kean returned as teacher to Ashgrove School for another term. . .

NOW . . . September, 1956
J. A. Carroll is in the news this week, and after retiring from government has become manager of the new Brampton branch of Halton and Peel Trust Co. . . W. A. Wilson has been dead for several years, ex-mayor Harold Cleave has been succeeded in office by Joseph Gibbons and present mayor Jack Armstrong. The pylon is rather foolish memorial as it serves no practical purpose; is still part of the park scenery. . . Mr. Tapp's mother left her position on the public school staff for a similar job in Gravenhurst and the family has lost touch with Georgetown. . . Miss Kean traded her school teaching chores to become Mrs. John M. Bird, wife of a district farmer. . . Mr. Diggins closed his plant here, moving to Port Credit and later to California. The hope: Beer of the O'Neill block is now the Hen's Davis Wood Products Co. . . Growth of the town has led to a works staff of 13. Mr. Kerr is now employed at Provincial Paper, Ltd.
