Certainly It's Needed

Turn-down by the highways department of a request for traffic lights at a dangerous highway crossing in Georgetown should be subject to immediate review, and it is to be hoped council pursues the request further.

Statistics compiled by the department evidently reveal that standards cannot be met to justify lights. While realizing that care must be exercised and that a highway should not be cluttered with too many traffic obstructions, a town must have some rights too. It should not be necessary for a major accident to happen before traffic lights come, and sooner or later that's just what will happen.

One has only to pass by the John St. intersection at noon hour or 5 p.m. when Smith and Stone traffic flows down . . . on Saturday after-

Georgetown Grows Fast

An increase of a million and three quarters dollars in taxable assessment, and a population jump of 1249 in a single year, express clearly in statistics the enormous growth our town has experienced in a year's period ending in September.

The population rise means increased costs of doing public business. There are more streets to maintain, more children to educate, and almost every municipal service from garbage collection to municipal office routine is in process of expansion.

The assessment rise is, of course, the happy side of the picture, for it means more taxpayers to share costs.

Confusing and Amusing

Remarks of an attendant at Monday's council meeting drew chuckles when he said a visiting relative was reduced to jibbering gibberish by the time he arrived on a visit from the city.

Seems brother and wife were driving into town from Toronto when she remarked on the start of a 45 mile zone. He glanced sideways to note a 30 mile sign. She glanced out and said "No, it's now a 35 mile zone." He checked and saw another 30 sign.
