First Public Concert By Town Boys' Band

Much interest was taken Friday night in the first public appearance of Georgetown Boys Band, which entertained shoppers for half an hour in the early evening on Main Street.

The boys paraded downtown from Chapel Street school where they hold their weekly practices, and grouped on the steps of the Royal Bank where Alf Perrot conducted them in a series of band selections.

It was also the first time they had worn their new uniforms, grey flannels, blue blazers, white shirts and blue ties.
