Tips For Protection Of Farm Grain Crops

J. E. W.
 Insects cause considerable loss to farmers each year by causing damage in stored grains. They eat the kernels, contaminate the grain with insect fragments, and cause the grain to heat and become worthless. Among insects causing damage to stored grain are the granary weevil, saw-toothed grain beetle, flour beetle and confused flour beetle.

Trouble can be avoided by taking precautions to prevent infestations of insects before threshing or combining. Now is the time to clean out and treat the empty bins. If infested grain is to be held over, it should be moved to another storage before the new crop is stored. If this isn't possible, it is advisable to dispose of it, or it may be fumigated.

Directions for fumigating are included in the Circular 225, "Stored-Grain Insects in Farm Storage", available at your Agricultural Representative's office of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

After thoroughly cleaning the empty bin, spray the walls and floors with an insecticide that will kill any insects that remain, or come to the bin. Spray the ceiling, walls and floor, to the point of run-off (about 1 gallon to 1,000 square feet) with one of the following:

25 per cent Lindane wettable powder, 2 pound in 5 gallons of water, or 50 per cent Methoxychlor powder one pound in 5 gallons of water. Emulsion forms are available and these may be diluted with water to one per cent.

Another method of protecting grain is by adding a protectant to the grain when it is binned. Grain protectants are available and may be added to the grain coming from the combine by wagon or truck and mixed while being transferred to the bin. In the case of grain from the threshing machine, the protectant could be added to every 6 to 10 inches of grain in the bin and "walked" or shovelled in. If grain is already in the bin, for full protection, shovel it out and treat with the correct amount of material. Provided the grain is dry, protection should last a year. This method is not recommended for grain that is already infested.

Prevention is better than cure. With careful clean-up and residual sprays on walls of the granary, plus a protectant added to the grain at the time it goes to the bin, there should be very little loss from this "weevil" group.

THE MAIL BAG

Postic Tribute Thanks Doctors, Hospital Nurses

Guelph, Ontario.
 Dear Editor: - Have been very ill in hospital here.

Am feeling much better now and wrote the enclosed 2 poems. I would like you to print them. I feel that I owe very, very much to a few people up here and this is the only way I can show my gratitude.

Sincerely,
 K. Cordaro.

THE DOCTOR

As we travel along life's rough pathway,
 We stumble on many woes,
 The greatest of which is sickness,
 Where it comes from nobody knows.

So we wind our way to the Doctor,
 Who listens to all of our woes,
 He seems to know all the answers,
 Just practice and brains, I suppose.

He whisks you away for an X-ray,
 And soon knows that he was quite right,
 For surgery you are slated,
 O dear, what a terrible fright.

You can't face the prospect with calmness,
 You put it off months or for years
 Then all of a sudden, you'd had it
 And give in with just a few tears.

Then into the hospital clean and bright
 You've made up your mind, it's got to be right,
 Now comes the test of the doctor
 In charge.

On the skill of his fingers,
 Hangs all, small and large,
 He takes out the bad spots
 That caused so much grief and
 Sews you up neatly.

The job can't be beat,
 When back in your room,
 He still comes along,
 There are things that are needful
 Before you are stronger.

When he knows you're improving
 You can tell by his smile,
 His patient is better
 That makes it worth while

We wonder what his thoughts are
 As he takes that knife in hand,
 Does he breathe a silent prayer
 For God's wise and guiding hand?

Without doctors and nurses,
 What would we ever do?
 The world would surely be Hopeless.

For folks like me and you
 God bless them in their labours,
 The care of the sick and the maintained.

They deserve all the praise we can Give them,
 They give us our health again.

A tribute to Dr. Walter Scott and Dr. Chamberlain, from a grateful patient, Jehovah's Witness, Katherine Cordaro.

A TRIBUTE

Moments were hours filled with torture,
 As I lay on my bed of pain,
 And longed for a little comfort,
 But longing was all in vain.

I prayed to Jehovah, O God help me now,
 Send someone to help me,
 I need it, right now.

Then up to my bedside
 A nurse, calm and sure,
 Attended my dressings
 To help with my cure.

She smoothed my aching forehead,
 Gently helped me out of bed,
 Ah! Here was the help I had prayed for.

God bless you, I softly said
 But relief from my pain was not lasting,
 It was harder than ever, it seemed
 Would nobody come to help me,
 Each breath was a nightmarish dream.

As I gazed on the world from my pillow,
 With eyes filled with horrible pain
 I looked for the nurse with the dark eyes,

Quite sure she could ease my pain,
 Then along came the night hours
 As everyone knows,
 An ordeal that has to be borne,
 No sleep or rest for my body,
 With pain and anguish torn.

But Jehovah had wisely provided
 Two nurses with hearts of gold,
 At the first little ring from my bedside,

They gave me relief untold,
 And lo and behold without trouble
 My glass of skim milk was there,
 To help me get down those two tablets,

To give me some comfort, somewhere.

I asked for no special favours,
 To others that would not be fair,
 Too many sick, ailing people,
 Depended on their special care.

It was beyond the call of duty
 To offer that strong, young arm,
 But they gave their help so freely,
 It began to work like a charm.

Today as I strive in my feeble way,
 To say just how grateful I am
 There just isn't words to express it.

My actions will prove it, and can,
 One thing I am certainly sure of
 You nurses, keep this firm in mind
 All the wonderful skill of the surgeon,

Hangs on you at the crucial time,
 The medical nursing profession,
 Is the noblest in all the world.

99,000 Canadians Numbered in Investors Syndicate Savings Plan

Dick Riddall

If you were giving to start a business which had as its principal basis, the idea of persuading people to accept an obligation, you would likely turn it down. But this simple idea is the foundation of Investors Syndicate of Canada, Limited - the largest financial organization of its kind in Canada.

Investors Syndicate has pioneered in the selling of savings certificates based on the theory that self-obligation in thrift is a necessary element in the lifetime financial planning if most people. In this, the company has been remarkably successful. Since its incorporation in 1940 its assets have grown to over $197 million at the end of 1956.

The obligation part of the certificate is matched by a contractual obligation on the part of the company to pay the holder a guaranteed amount of money, and a guaranteed return after a specified time, providing the holder complies with the payment responsibilities to which he is obligated under the terms of the contract. The Investors organization has never failed to meet this obligation.

Investors Syndicate's term certificates are designed to assist people to accumulate money. Whether the amount be large or small, the contract enables the holder to accumulate it in a systematic manner. Certificates are issued with 6, 10, 15 and 20-year maturities and in face amounts of from $1000 to over $100,000. When a certificate is matured the proceeds may be withdrawn in a lump sum or in the form of an annuity income. At December 31, 1956 the maturity amount of Investors Syndicate certificates in force totalled over $383 million.

The company was incorporated in 1940 in the province of Manitoba. From its head office in Winnipeg it directs a chain of over 20 divisional offices in principal Canadian cities and a force of over 400 sales representatives.

Through its former parent company, Investors Diversified Services, Inc., I.S.C. has had longer association with money management than its history would indicate. I.D.S. was established, as Investors Syndicate of America, Inc., in Minneapolis, Minn., in 1894, and currently manages assets of more than $2 billion. I.S.A. operated in Canada from 1926 to 1940.

Investments made by Investors Syndicate must qualify under the British and Canadian Insurance Companies Act. The major portion of the company's assets of over $107 million is invested in first mortgages through which it has financed the homes of thousands of Canadians and Commercial and business as well. Under its Act of incorporation, the company is required to maintain, with an approved depository (The Toronto General Trusts Corporation), securities at least equal in amount to its total liabilities in certificates in force.

At the end of 1956 more than 99,000 Canadians held I.S.C. certificates. In the past year, more than 17,000 Canadians planned to save more than $78 million through I.S.C. certificates. Having found its answer to the money-saving problems of the average Canadian, Investors began to consider means of providing assistance for those who had money to invest but who did not have the time, training or experience to manage their own investment.

Investors Mutual of Canada Ltd. was incorporated as a balanced, open-end mutual fund early in 1950. Shares of Investors Mutual are managed and exclusively distributed by Investors Syndicate under agreement with its shareholders who are the funds owners.

The purpose of Investors Mutual is to provide a medium by which an individual may invest as little as a few hundred dollars in a wide variety of leading Canadian securities in one step and still obtain the advantages of reasonable income and the possibility of capital gains, and do so with minimum risk. Through such an "investment pool" the individual of modest means can acquire an investment which is constantly supervised by trained professional management.

The amazing growth of Investors Mutual in 7 years is proof that there are many Canadians who are attracted by this kind of investment, one which enables them to participate in the growth and future of their country on a long-range basis. At Oct. 31, 1956, the assets of Investors Mutual amounted to over $123 million dollars (as compared with $90 million at Oct. 31, 1955) and shareholders numbered over 34,000. By June, 1957 these assets had increased to more than $142,000,000.

During 1956, approximately 10,000 Canadians invested more than $29 million in shares of the company. Since its inception in 1950 the company had paid to its shareholders, in the form of dividends which are paid on a quarterly basis, more than $11,200,000 at May 14, 1957. Shareholders have the option of re-investing their dividends automatically, without cost, and 88% of them do.

In the interests of its 99,000 certificate holders and the 34,000 shareholders of Investors Mutual, Investors Syndicate currently manages assets totalling more than $240 million. These assets under administration are increasing at the rate of approximately $3,800,000 per month. During fiscal 1956 the sale of new shares of Investors Mutual alone required an average of $116,000 to be invested daily. The actual volume of Investors Mutual securities transactions, including purchases and sales, was over $47 million, or approximately $187,000 per day.

In Georgetown district, Investors Syndicate is represented by a well known Georgetown resident, Dick Riddall.
