Glen, Stewarttown To

Become Anglican Parish

Returning to the pulpit of St. George's and St. Alban's Anglican churches on Sunday after a vacation, Rev. Kenneth Richardson had an important announcement to make concerning the future of churches in the area.

Reporting on a letter received from Bishop W. E. Bagnall, he said Georgetown will become a separate parish. St. Alban's, Glen Williams, which has been a part of Georgetown since the church was built in 1902, will be joined with St. John's, Stewarttown, in a new parish, to be created when a rector is secured to serve these churches.

The new parish will reduce by one the churches served by Rev. J. E. Maxwell who will continue to be rector of St. Paul's, Norval and St. Stephen's, Hornby.

During Mr. Richardson's vacation, services were taken here by Archdeacon A. C. Macintosh, Hamilton, well-known locally when he assisted for several months after Archdeacon Thompson's retirement.
