Sugar and Spice

Dispersed by BILL SMILEY of the Winton Echo

I know where I want to go for my holidays this year. I want to spend my whole week without pay in some small, inland hamlet, set out in the middle of a couple of fields, with no highways and no water bigger than a well, within miles.

"It must be wonderful to live where you do in the summer," people say, "with all that water and everything." Right in the middle of a beautiful resort area. But you don't ever want to go away for a holiday, do you? Well, I don't want to, but must, if I'm to pull through the summer.

This living in a tourist town looks great, from the outside. All those fascinating, good-looking tourists. All that wonderful fishing, those terrific beaches. And so grand for sleeping at night, cool and refreshing, not like the steamy old city.

Trouble is, only about one tourist in 84 is good looking, and she's always going by on the other side of the street, with two armfuls of groceries ruining the view. The other 83 are just like you and I - pot-bellied, slab-hipped, bandy-legged, warty-nosed, bald-headed, and frowny faced.

And they're nice enough people but they're not exactly fascinating. Perhaps in their own balliwicks they talk with enthusiasm of Bee-then and Browning, but around here all they are interested in is the whereabouts of the beer store.

All that grand fishing and swimming! Since the summer people began to arrive, I haven't had a line in the water. I'm so busy tending the tourists where to catch fish, I can't get any work done, so I have to work at night, so I don't get a chance to go fishing. Swimming? I haven't been in for two years. I'm too old to look good with a crew cut, which is what you have a very good chance of getting if you try swimming with all those summer people charging around in boats with big motors.

Cool and refreshing for sleeping? Yes, indeed. One of the coolest places on the continent is my cellar. And we've had so many visitors in the last couple of weeks, that's where I've been sleeping, on an old work bench, the only horizontal place left in the house without somebody snoring on it.

Refreshing? Well, I can't say that I feel too refreshed, when the morning sun filters through the dirty cellar windows, and I climb out from under my potato bags, in fact, right about then, I'd trade the whole ten-room house for one steamy bachelor apartment in the city.

Guess I'm just too old and cranky for the gay life of a summer resort town. The kids love it. They get brown and healthy, and what with Bible School, swim classes, water fights and lots of strange kids around, their days are sheer delight. When they are finally chivvied off to bed at night, they are asleep in twelve seconds and as relaxed for the next ten hours as punctured balloons.

And the Old Girl is in her element.

ment in summertime. It's much more pleasant to wade through a foot of long grass than a foot of snow, when you're hanging out the clothes. It's much more simple to rattle up peanut butter sandwiches and milk than to prepare a hot dinner. And instead of hounding kids about piano practice, clean faces and shined shoes, she just turns them over to the best baby sitter of them all, old Ma Nature, and lets her look after them.

The only one who suffers is Dear Old Dad. Summer is somewhat of a nightmare for me. A newspaper is not published by some sleight-of-hand method, even in a summer resort area. But you have to cope with people on their holidays, and there is a steady procession of friends from the city who want you to knock off and have a beer, retired printers, former residents and tourists wanting to know what time Mass is on Sunday.

Between these interruptions, and the toll taken by cottage parties, swimming jaunts with the kids, the knowledge that there are still ashes in the cellar and storm windows to come off, and working nights to catch up, it's little wonder that I'm just one big nervous tick by the end of July.

When Labour Day comes, I'm going to be up at the gates at the entrance to town, with a big happy grin on my face, waving a gay goodbye to the jolly holidayers. Then I'm going to take my holidays and go home and sleep for a week.

ASHGROVE

REV. GEORGE STEPHENSON SPEAKS AT WAS SERVICE

Harvesting is now in full swing. Combines can be seen going up and down; also the odd field of stocks.

The W.M.S. had charge of the service on Sunday morning with president Mrs. Leslie Giffen presiding. Mrs. Cecil Wilson read Psalm 117 for the responsive reading. There was prayer by Mrs. John Bellbody, two delightful solos by Mr. Tom Trouten of Georgetown "Teach me to pray" and "The Lost Chord." The speaker was Rev. George Stephenson of Toronto, formerly of Limehouse, who has two missionary daughters. His scripture readings from 4th chapter of Luke and 28th chapter of Matthew, dealt with "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." He said that Christ did a marvellous thing for the world by his preaching and teaching and the church was born and became a reality. He stressed the great need for missionaries both in Canada and on the foreign fields and reminded that Jesus gave his life on the cross for us. Let us rededicate ourselves with new dedication he said. We must go forward and live and die to make men free.

There will be no service in our church for the next two Sundays. On August 25th the Young People will have charge.

Laurie Blake of Woodbridge is having some holidays at the home of his cousin, Marilyn Wilson.

The Young People had their picnic Sunday afternoon at Barber's Beach. All present enjoyed games and swimming, followed by a picnic supper.

Ten of our young folk left on Sunday for a week at Mirimachi Camp—Nancy Hunter, Doreen Carney, Nora Barnes, Barbara and Patsy Blackett, Karen Bridgen, Jeffrey Nurse, Faye Graham, Kent and Hugh Graham.

Poster Competition is Planned for Grade Fivers

A poster competition, open to all Grade 5 pupils in Halton County, is being sponsored by the newly-formed Halton Fire Prevention Bureau.

Meeting in Milton recently, this was discussed along with a number of other items pertaining to Fire Prevention Week. One boy and one girl in the county will receive trophies in the competition. It will be an annual event sponsored by Halton Farmers' Mutual Aid Company.

The theme for this year is "Fire Prevention in the Home."

A NOTE TO DOG LOVERS

The following is in part a letter received from a man who wrote to a certain hotel and asked if they permitted dogs:

"I've been in the hotel business over 30 years. Never yet have I called the police to eject a disorderly dog during the small hours of the night. Never yet has a dog set the bed clothes afire from smoking a cigarette. I've never found towels or blankets in a dog's suitcase, nor whisky rings on a bureau from a dog's bottle. Sure the dog's welcome. P. E. H. Moore."
