Commerce Chamber Seeks Review of Customs Act

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce in a major policy statement on trade has asked the federal government to make a complete review of the Customs Tariff Act and the Customs Act "in order to have this legislation meet the demand of Canada's dynamic economy".

Prime Minister Diefenbaker and the Cabinet were told by a Canadian Chamber delegation headed by President Ralph Fybus, Vancouver that certain segments of the Canadian economy are seriously affected by competition from foreign sources. Some of these problems could be alleviated, it was stated, by exercising control over the tariff classifications of imports, by strengthening the regulations to prevent imports at dump prices, and, by investigating promptly imports suspected of evaded dumping duty. These steps could be taken without deviating from the principles of GATT or other existing agreements. The Chamber, it was pointed out, continued to subscribe to those principles of conduct expressed in GATT that are requisite to expanding trade on a multilateral basis throughout the world.

Other policies stressed by the Chamber delegation had to do with employer-employee relations, taxation and government expenditure. Canada's relations with the United States and the United Kingdom. All told over 40 policy declarations and resolutions were laid before the government by the Canadian Chamber delegation as representing the majority views of over 750 Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce with an underlying membership of some 125,000 businessmen across Canada.

On employer-employee relations the Chamber said in part: "The Chamber supports the principle of collective bargaining between the representatives of employers and employees. Labour unions and other employees' organizations have responsibilities to the public, to employers and to their own members, just as management has responsibilities to the public, to its employees and to shareholders. The Chamber believes that both parties should be equally responsible under the law."

New policies on automation and employment of the older worker also were brought to the attention of the government. Failure to harness automation's advantages to improve productivity, the Chamber said, would prove fatal to the competitive position of many Canadian industries, with corresponding damage to "our hopes of an improving standard of living". By introducing automation gradually, there would be opportunities for any required retraining or redeployment of the work force. As for employment of the older worker, the government was told that the Canadian Chamber would urge Canadian employers to recognize the skill and experience of older workers and give consideration to the suitable employment of this group to the fullest extent practicable.

Dealing with taxation and government spending, the Chamber warned that the current level of government expenditures requires both personal and corporate income tax rates that are too high for a developing country. The government also was asked to arrange at the earliest possible moment a conference of federal, provincial and municipal representatives for the purpose of seeking "a more just and practicable distribution of the tax revenue and responsibility among these three levels of government."

On Canada's relations with the United States and the United Kingdom, the Chamber stressed the importance of increasing mutual understanding. Among other things, there was specific reference to the desirability of doing everything possible to attract a larger volume of United Kingdom investment in this country.

The Chamber's submission also asked among other things that the government:

1. Extend the facilities of the Industrial Development Bank to embrace the tourist industry and thus promote "an orderly expansion of the tourist industry throughout Canada."
 2. Allow no relaxation in Canada's defense efforts until definite and concrete results have been achieved in easing international tension.
 3. Make an immediate thorough study of air and water pollution and take appropriate action as this question has become a problem of "great concern to many areas."
 4. Extend to 8 p.m. the hours of polling in federal elections. Provide for the greatly extended use of advance polls in federal elections.

Georgetown Burial for Miss Arline Penson

Miss Arline Penson, who lived in Georgetown for several years with her family at 53 Market St. died on November 9th at her home, 254 Kingswood Rd., Toronto.

A Toronto native, she was the daughter of the late Seymour R. G. Penson and Flora Macdonald Coutts, and had also lived in Port Carling and Hamilton. She was a member of the Anglican Church. Miss Penson was an exceptionally talented musician, but her health was delicate and did not permit her to make a career of it. She continued to study piano until her last severe illness.

She leaves one brother—George Alan Penson of Port Carling and one sister, Elizabeth of Toronto, who was science teacher at Georgetown High School at the time of her retirement a few years ago. Richard Coutts, who was a cousin of Miss Penson's mother was principal of Georgetown High School for 17 years.

Cremation followed the funeral service in the Chapel of St. James the Less last Tuesday, with interment in Greenwood Cemetery, Georgetown.

Peel Succeeds Halton Wins Judging at Royal

The inter-county Livestock Judging Competition at the Royal attracted 28 county teams of three each. In first position was the Peel County team of Jim Fraser, Keith Parkinson, and Clarence Rutledge. They won the Jeffrey Bull Memorial trophy which was won in 1966 by Halton's team of Lynne Coulter, George Greenlegs, and Wm. C. Robinson.

This year Halton was represented by Jim Brown, Ralph Cunningham, and Harold Lawrence, who placed 16th, which all factors considered was an excellent showing. The highlight from a Halton standpoint was the showing made by Jim Brown, who scored 494 out of a possible 500, on his placings. The young men had to place ten classes in all — three each in dairy cattle, beef cattle, swine, and one in sheep and of course oral reasons for their placings on all ten classes.

Ontario County had the winning dairy team — Peel the winning beef team, and Hastings the top swine team.

OAC Team Wins

In a new competition open to four students who are enrolled in the second year of a Diploma Course at an Agricultural School or College, the OAC team placed first, with Ridgeway Agricultural School team second, and Kemptville team in third position.
