Be Sure to Vote

Hackneyed though it might seem the slogs an "Vote as you like . . . but vote" is still a time-9 ly one, and one which should make its impression on every Georgetowner next Monday.

Ten people are offering their services as members of the six-member Georgetown council. The successful candidates will serve Georgetown in one of its most interesting and critical years, when expansion of population and civic services calls for close attention to detail. There will be decisions, too, to make on many important matters and it is no light job that an incoming councillor takes on his shoulders.

It is not too much to ask, surely, that each man and woman entitled to vote should use his franchise, and in fact should spend some time prior to Monday examining the platforms of those who seek office and be as informed as possible about any issues involved in such platforms.

The Herald would not presume to tell you how to vote. That is a matter for each to decide himself. During the year, this newspaper reports in detail the council meetings, relaying items of every sort which ratepayers should know if readers have followed the news, they should have a fair idea of the capabilities of present council members, who seek re-election, and be in a position to judge whether they want them back; some of the new candidates, too, have put their views across publicly at council meetings, at the nomination or in advertisements in the paper, to give some basis for judging their abilities.

It would be wonderful if on Monday, Georgetown, a town which sets records in many de- in grade 7 and Michaela, 5, who partments, could boast of the highest percentage vote in any municipality. And it can be done, if everyone who isn't a complete invalid, goes to

Help Firemen By Staying Away

Sunday's large barn fire could have had even more disastrous consequences than the loss of a barn, and it was only a divine providence which allowed the fire truck to get to the scene at all through the maze of spectator traffic which threatened to clog lower Main Street entirely at one time.

There is something fascinating about a fire, and there is no use pretending that human beings shouldn't be so curious. There is an almost uncontrollable impulse, when the siren sounds, and the fire truck whirls by, to follow it. We've done it ourselves, and we've been just as guilty as the next person of contributing to the mass confusion around the fire scene. But we have been trying hard these past few years, to keep at a reasonable distance from the scene and particularly to keep well away from the road which the fire truck must travel.

Sunday, for instance, realizing where the fire was located, we joined many others in viewing it across the valley on Rexway Drive. We had, in fact, an orchestra seat compared to those who rushed down Main Street and got involved in the Norm Fendley of Norval and Hartraffic maze on a slippery hill.

We know the firemen will appreciate it another time if spectators keep their distance, and particularly keep their cars out of the way. Their Saturday. Mr. Darcie is a teacher job is to save lives and property and the best way we can help them is to keep from hampering their arrival at a time when seconds count.

Shopping Districts Look Gay

Heralding the Christmas season, the Georgetown shopping areas are looking gay these days, as merchants complete their decorating of windows and stores. Strings of coloured lights also add a festive touch to the shopping scene, and with snow promised by the weatherman today, it will really bring to the forefront the fact that Christmas is only three weeks away.

Soon homes will be decking themselves in Dundas. seasonal finery coloured lights, gay wreaths and holly, lighted trees. And everyone will be wearing a little happier expression as the Christmas spirit takes over. It's a wonderful time of
