Former Toronto Mayor is Warden's Dinner Speaker

Halton's achievements in 1957 under the direction of County Warden Thomas A. Millward, Reeve of Bronte, were lauded December 10th when the Warden was host to about 175 county and provincial officials at the annual Warden's Dinner in the Pine Room of the Oakville arena.

Highlight of the evening was the stirring message by guest speaker William J. Stewart, former Mayor of Toronto and presently a member of Metro council, who told his audience of the advantages and disadvantages of the merging of 13 Metro municipalities to govern a million and a half people in 240 square miles.

"I shudder when I think what would have happened if Metro hadn't come into being," declared the speaker, in outlining its advantages.

Looking ahead to the future of the Toronto area, where within 100 miles of the City lies one-third of the purchasing area of Ontario, Mr. Stewart wondered if the Oakville-Trafalgar area might meet the Oshawa area, and predicted that the Seaway would bring a tremendous increase in population to the area. Foresight, democratic government and an individual interest in civics were the main requisites, he explained, and scored the "apathy and indifference" to municipal politics shown by most people.

"You have many problems here," the speaker continued, "and the solutions can be found in a thoroughly-educated people" (here he praised the power and service of the press) "and with an advisory board of area citizens to study the problems."

He was introduced by Wilder Breckonridge, editor of the Oakville Record-Star, and thanked by Reeve Bill Card of Oakville.

Reeve Don Bath of Trafalgar proposed the Warden's toast, and Mr. Millward replied. His Honor Judge W. N. Robinson proposed the toast to County Council and Reeve Stan Allen of Georgetown replied. The toast to the past wardens was given by Lloyd D. Dingle, Q.C. and responded to by K. Y. Dick. During the program ex-Warden Stan Allen was presented with his gavel, and MPP Stan Hall and M.P. Sandy Best presented roses to Mrs. Millward and Mrs. Stewart.

Halton's debating champions John Black, Bertha Watson, Bill Marshall and Howson Ruddell were presented engraved gold watches from the county by Warden Millward.

At the conclusion of the evening, the Warden was presented with a hostess chair by his fellow county councillors.

The waitress at the George View Open Kitchen seems to like the pony worth $300 as much as JIM COSTIGAN does. But it's his prize to keep if he wishes. It became his when the Key Tag he received at the Kitchen turned out to have a winning number in the KEY MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION. If Mr. Costigan of Georgetown chooses, he can receive the equivalent amount of "trade dollars" rather than the pony.
