Queen's Pk. Report

Dear Sir:
Your Legislature opened this week on the 17th of March, St. Patrick's Day; it was a great day for the Irish and was marked in the assembly by the wearing of shamrocks and green carnations.
The business of the Legislature started by presentation of the estimates of the Department of Health by the Hon. Dr. Phillips. The estimates amount to $73,496,000. This is a huge sum of money. It is not my intention to go into detail, but I would like to give you a few highlights — the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation receives $1,130,000 grants, to public hospitals $15,567,000, grants to the new Hospital Services Commission for the three months from January 1st, 1959 to March 31st, 1959 will amount to $4,625,000. These are huge amounts, but they represent the great growth and development of the province. I should explain that the payments to the new Hospital Services are paid in 1959. The financial year of government does not expire until March 31st, 1959.

On Tuesday, an oil portrait of the late Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, former Liberal Prime Minister of Ontario, was unveiled in the Assembly by the Prime Minister, Hon. Leslie Frost, assisted by Mr. H. C. Nixon, Liberal member for Brant County. Mrs. Mitchell Hepburn and Mrs. Sinclair, sister of Mr. Hepburn, were present. This beautiful portrait will be hung in the corridors of the Parliament Buildings beside other portraits of former prime ministers.

On March 19th, Hon. James Allan, Minister of Highways, presented the estimates of his department. In 1955, the Department of Highways spent for all purposes $47,000,000, in 1956, $70,000,000, and in 1958 the Department will spend $135,000,000. From this huge sum of money to be spent, $44,000,000 will be paid to municipalities through the Municipal Assistance Grants.

On March 20th, the Hon. James Allan, speaking on behalf of the government, brought to a close addresses and debates on the Speech from the Throne. Fifty members of the Legislature have spoken in this debate. When Mr. Allan finished his address, the vote was taken in the amendment to the Speech from the Throne, moved the Opposition.

The amendment moved by Mr. Oliver, Leader of the Opposition, was that the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor, now before the House, be amended by adding thereto the following words: but this House regrets the Government has failed to—1. Take any effective action to meet the rising unemployment in Ontario; 2. Correct the ever worsening condition of our agriculture industry.

This amendment of the opposition was lost by the largest majority since I have been a member of the Legislature.
Before I will have the opportunity of visiting with you next week, your Ontario Government will be prorogued.

POLITICAL DIFFERENCES PRIVILEGE OF DEMOCRACY

Georgetown, Ont., March 23rd, 1958
The Georgetown Herald,
Georgetown, Ont.
Dear Sir:

First of all let me thank you for the space you have given me in your paper these past few weeks.
And to my very determined opponent, I am sorry that I cannot accept her invitation to visit her for further discussion as my time will not permit it. Further I can see that it would serve no useful purpose, as she would probably vote Peace - Prosperity if all the Liberals had horns.

It has been said that "Where all people think alike, nobody thinks very much." In a country where we can express our views without fear of reprisal or suppression it has given me much pleasure to disagree with her.

In the new few days the people of Canada will choose a new government and I am sure that we will see them choose the BEST man for the job.
Yours sincerely,
—G. G. Standish

HOW'S YOUR I.Q.?
TODAY'S INSURANCE PROBLEMS ANSWERED

Question: A car purchased by a friend was repossessed not long ago after he had paid for a whole year's Collision Insurance. Can he get back any of his insurance premium?
Answer: Yes, the unused portion of his insurance money will be refunded either on a pro-rata basis or a short-rate basis, depending on the particular company. If cancelled by the insured it would be short-rate.

CO-OP INSURANCE REPORTS OVER 64,000 POLICIES

Steady progress of Co-Operators insurance association was noted at a recent meeting in Mount Hope attended by agents, Federation of Agriculture representatives and their wives from the six counties of Halton, Lincoln, Welland, Hamilton, Brant and Wentworth.

At the end of 1949 the association had just over 4,300 policies in force, mostly auto, whereas by the end of 1957 there were 66,610 policies including a significant volume of urban fire, farm liability and accident and sickness insurance as well as auto. New divisional offices have been opened in London and Ottawa, and local service offices are now operating in Windsor and Hamilton.

With the increased growth of the association, there has been increased assistance given to the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and local county federations. Attending the meeting from North Halton were Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hume, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Coulter, and Norman Bird, District manager Reg Gardiner, Hamilton, was the chairman of the meeting.

An Interesting Evening

Those who attended the political meeting in Wrigglesworth School last Thursday were well rewarded for their attendance. They heard an excellent two hours of speechmaking, questions and answers which passed all too quickly and which proved to be informative, interesting and provocative.

After hearing the three candidates speak, we are convinced that the political parties have chosen men well qualified to represent their views. All are fluent, interesting speakers, and quick witted, as was shown in the question period which is one of the toughest obstacles a speaker can face. They parried a variety of questions with ease, answering them when they could, and making a graceful retreat when obstacles loomed too large. One could say that, divorcing political theory from the election, it would be difficult to choose between the three in their ability, sincerity and dedication to the job of serving in parliament.

It was equally pleasing to see members of the audience behave as ladies and gentlemen should. While questions were often pointed, they were never asked in a nasty way and there were no regrettable incidents which sometimes occur in the heat of such a bi-partisan meeting. Chairman Sid Hardie takes some share of the credit, too, for the excellent job he did in that department.

Thanks are due to East Georgetown Rate-payers for promoting the evening.

Should Have Malton Assessment

Increasing numbers of Malton workers becoming residents of Georgetown makes the question of a town getting a share of an industry's assessment a topical one which should have the attention of municipal and provincial government.

A decade ago, Georgetown had no such problem. Like towns farther removed from metropolitan areas, a large percentage of workers were locally employed and any deficiencies in taxes on homes were offset by taxes paid by the industries which employed them. Today it is quite the contrary. A conservative estimate could place at least three hundred local homes as owned by people employed elsewhere than in local industry. And if, as we are told, tax payments on a house do not equal the cost of civic services entailed, the farther we go, the dimmer the tax future looks.

We should think it time for the province to study the question of allowing a "dormitory" municipality some share of a large company's tax assessment and arrive at some formula fair to the municipality in which the industry is located and to the towns which harbour its employees.

Her Work Will Live on

Miss Elizabeth Appelbe was a lady who dedicated her life to history, and there is possibly no one in the county who possessed such a fund of knowledge about the early days in Halton as she did. Her notes and documents are of priceless value and though she never realized her dream of compiling these into a printed history of the county, we are sure relatives will take care to preserve these and some day the opportunity will come to preserve a permanent record of long-ago days which, unless it is put on paper, becomes lost as years go by.

It was our regret as an editor, that we never had enough time as we would have liked to chat with Miss Appelbe. Nothing could have pleased us more than to be able to take a sabbatical year and delve into the fascinating history of the county, helping prepare records for posterity.

The sad thing is that it may never be done unless someone with independent means sets himself to the task. With this in mind, we suggest as we have on past occasions, that the county council allot a sum of money for such research, engage a qualified writer-historian and get at the job as soon as possible. The longer it is left, the less "old timers" there are who can authenticate historical facts and separate the legend from the truth. A $10,000 allocation should be more than ample to pay expenses and salary to a writer to spend a year or two on the job.

Sugar and Spice

Dispersed by BILL SMILEY of the Wharton Echo

"A politician," my great uncle, Moulton Jack Thompson, told me when I was a little boy, "is like a pet pup. When he wants something he fawns all over you. When you pay any attention to him, he runs around in circles, yapping and chasing his tail. But when he's supposed to be guarding the henhouse, he's curled up behind the stove, asleep."

There was something else in there, about always making a mess for somebody else to clean up—but I guess I was too young to understand.

Of course, anyone can qualify as a wit by making sarcastic remarks about politicians. Personally, I've always despised this as a cheap practice. I think politicians have a tough row to hoe. Even though some of them would be a lot more useful with a hoe in their hands, in somebody's turnip patch, than doing what they are.

But don't forget those long, weary sessions in the House, where they have to hang on every word of a debate with exhausting keenness. Except when they're reading the paper, of course, or out having a smoke, or down in the cafeteria, or over at the Chateau Laurier, having a snort with some of the boys.

And think of those awful week-ends. Sometimes the press of public business won't let them get away from Ottawa until Thursday afternoon. Then there's the long dreary, free, train-ride home, trapped in some smoky first-class coach with a lot of fellows telling vulgar stories, smoking cigars and drinking whiskey. That's pretty hard on the nerves, I can tell you, after the quiet of the House.

But however rigorous is the lot of the politician at Ottawa, imagine how crushing it is for him when the session ends, and he has to go home and live like the rest of the peasants. No more jolly sessions with fellow-members in a French restaurant in Hull. No more impressing the delegation from the home town with his easy familiarity with "John," "Mike" and "Paul."

Instead he's got to go to church every Sunday, march in all the Legion parades and attend all the fiftieth wedding anniversary celebrations. He must charge about the riding, from one stultifying banquet to another, telling the same pair of tired jokes. His ear is bruised and tender from listening to demands for new docks, new post offices and old-age pensions for people who aren't too sure when they were born. He is lapped for a ticket on every rail line in the riding and is touched for a ten-spot by every organization in whose vicinity he finds himself.

And when his course is run, what is left for this willing work-horse, this servant of the people? Sheer ingratitude is his lot. He faces three alternatives, all equally horrible. He goes on pension, a miserly $3,000 a year, which will scarcely keep him in the cigars he has grown accustomed to. Or he is hoisted up to the Senate, where he must labour and sweat over legislation until he drops dead from sheer exhaustion at the age of 80. Or he loses an election, and has to start making an honest living again.

Oh, my heart goes out to them, these public spirited men. But a few vital statistics have emerged from the 1958 election campaign and we must face the facts. Here they are.

If all the politicians who are elected spent one quarter of the time, energy and enthusiasm on the affairs of the country that they have spent in being elected, Canada would be top nation in the world within five years.

If all the power that has been poured into hearty handshakes in this campaign could be transformed into electricity, we could turn Niagara Falls off for a month, and never miss it.

If all the political promises made in the past six weeks, were stacked on top each other, a fellow could climb the pile and board Sputnik as it went by.

And if all the politicians in Canada were laid end to end, they might not be as long as the Trans-Canada pipeline, but they'd produce twice the flow of gas.
