EVENING MEETINGS PROVE POPULAR WITH INSTITUTE

The Institute's decision to hold evening meetings this year seems to be a wise one, for at the June meeting held at the home of Mrs. George Burt, eighteen members attended. The Ceylon ode was read by Mrs. George Henderson, convener of the program, following our own ode, and the Mary Stewart Collect. Roll call was answered by naming a slip or plant, brought to be auctioned off later in the evening, and the good number brought in made a nice bit of money for the branch. Current events were given by Mrs. D. Williamson, and the motto: "A kitchen's more than just a place where pots and pans and brooms are kept"—was read by Mrs. Bert Corbett for Mrs. R. Corbett who was absent. A report on the District Directors' Conference in May in Guelph was given by Mrs. H. Marchington. An excellent demonstration on the making of fancy sandwiches was given by Mrs. W. D. Shier, Mrs. George Sivill and Mrs. George Henderson, proving the point that it is not always necessary to bring in outside talent for a good program. The sandwiches were enjoyed with a cup of tea served by our hostess. During the evening a cup and saucer with the Institute crest was presented to Mrs. Marchington, the retiring president.

THERE IS SOMETHING IN POULTRY HOUSING

J. E. W.
Here's a subject which is hot—Poultry Housing. More changes have taken place in poultry houses, from materials to actual-type of construction, in the past ten years than in the previous fifty. Remodelling your barn? Planning to put up a house for five hundred, a thousand, even five thousand layers? Then, if you are, you will not want to miss the talk and later discussion on poultry house construction. This will be given Friday afternoon, June 20th, at the mammoth poultry exhibition and conference being held at the Western Fair Grounds, on June 18, 19, and 20. It will be the largest exhibition ever held in Canada by the poultry industry — over sixty exhibitors displaying their equipment and goods — 17,000 square feet of displays — a giant barbecue — cooking demonstrations — a real bang-up show for anybody who has chickens or turkeys.

There will be plenty of room to park your car — entrance fee $1.00, for you and your family — lots to see and hear that will interest you, even help you, with your flocks.

Keep those dates in mind, June 18, 19, and 20 — the place Western Fair Grounds, London, the event, the largest poultry exhibition and poultry conference ever staged in Canada.
