COMBINES TAKE S & S IN INDUSTRIAL BALL FINISH

A pair of production innings and a basketful of Smith & Stone bables enabled the Combines to take the seventh and deciding game of the Industrial League Fastball championship played in perfect weather at the park on Sunday. The blueshirts scored twice in the bottom of the second inning to tie the game and added three more in the 6th to wrap up the series after S & S opened the door with some glaring glove work.

Scotty Patterson, who hurled the distance for the losers, rocketed Smith & Stone into their early two-run margin with a solid double that scored Gordie King and Jim Timleck, but Combines countered in their half of the second when Blake Inglis connected for a round tripper with Dave Leslie and Pete Pomeroy aboard. However, Pomeroy's rim was nullified when he failed to touch third.

The game was deadlocked until the bottom of the sixth when hits by Jim Sargent and Dave Leslie plus errors turned the game. There were two out and a man on base when Patterson popped to Inglis at first to bring the curtain down on the 1958 season. Patterson gave a creditable performance in suffering the loss while the Combine starter Gib Telford was equally effective, held the electrical workers to just two runs and needed no relief in gaining the win. Dave Boxford worked behind the plate for the Combines—Fred Hurst for Smith & Stone.

The league president, George Louth, presented the trophy symbolic of the fastball championship to Combine captain Blake Inglis in a hurried ceremony following the game. Close to 150 people watched the contest.
