New Advances in Nutrition
Nutrition is a word everybody has heard but few people really understand. Rapid strides are being made in this science. Diet has been found to be the cause of many conditions hitherto the cause of which was unknown. This has caused people to become more conscious of nutrition. Now there is an annual symposium of nutrition in which several authorities in the nutritional field give a series of lectures. This year's symposium is being held this week-end, Nov. 22, 1953 at the Frontenac Arms. The list of speakers are as follows:

Dr. Royal Lee, DDS
Dr. W. J. McCormick, MD
Dr. Myron R. Dexton, DO
Lyman C. Johnston,
Doctor of Chiropractic
Dr. Leo Roy, MD

Our office will be closed on Saturday while we attend the convention. We are making tape recordings of the lectures and allowing our patients who are interested, to hear them.

Mrs. Doug Davidson High Bowling Single

Mrs. Doug Davidson rolled a 271 to move into first place in the high single department of the North Halton ladies bowling on Monday. The previous high was held by Mrs. Ken Nash who dropped to third as Mrs. Scotty Herkes also bettered the mark with 265. Third high on the day was Mrs. Cyril Bradford with a 239.

Mrs. Bradford's 698 triple carried her to the top of the season high triples while a 635 by Mrs. Doug Davidson put her in third spot just seven pins behind Mrs. Ken Nash in second place. Mrs. Bradford and Mrs. Davidson were first and second on the day and Mrs. Scotty Herkes third with a 633.

Mrs. Ron Kitchen still holds the best average with a respectable 190. Mrs. Herkes' good day enabled her to hang onto second with 176 while Mrs. Len Ward retained third with 171.

Mrs. Ross Duncan's Chop Chops lead the pack with 32 points, seven points ahead of their closest rivals the Chumps captained by Eleanor Spitzer. Mrs. Scotty Herkes Rockettes are third with 18 and Mrs. Len Ward's Squibs trail with just nine.

Ladies' Night For Three Service Clubs

Something unique in the history of service club affairs took place last Monday night, when the three service clubs in Georgetown, the Kinsmen, Lions Club and Rotary, held a joint evening for their ladies in the auditorium of the Legion Hall, Mill Street.

The evening started with an Italian style dinner, featuring spaghetti and meat balls, pizza pie and other Italian specialties.

A piano accordionist supplied music during the dinner and afterwards, and there was tape recorded music for dancing.

Bill Rayercraft acted as master of ceremonies for the evening and various novelty dances were held and a number of novelty games.

Bill Hamilton, Rotary president was chairman for the dinner, and with his wife was at the head table, along with Lion president Dick Miller and Mrs. Miller and Kinsmen president, Clare Burns and wife.

Sugar and Spice
Dispensed by BILL SMILEY of the Winton Echo

There are some very peculiar ideas abroad these days. And it seems to me that women have practically cornered the market on them. Oh they don't think these fantasies up themselves, bless them. They absorb them as they peruse women's magazines. Along with a lot of half-baked psychology. Plus some recipes for such culinary delights as baked tuna fish salad with meringue topping, and various other dishes that any self-respecting hog would curl a lip at.

My wife came out with one of these inanities the other day, so flatly that I felt like punching her in the nose. It was during our annual, and heated, discussion of the storm windows: "Most men," she asserted with noseaching recitude, "like working around the house. Lots of 'em enjoy putting on the storm windows."

Well, I don't mind telling you I got pretty red in the face, confronted with that grade of pure, unadulterated poppycock. "Show me," I howled, "one lousy single man who says he likes putting on storm windows, and I'll show you a great big fat liar!" And I repeat the challenge here.

Oh, I admit there are lots of men who like to putter around in their "workshops," the cowards. Rather than fight it out with the old lady, they'll go down and muck about with their power saws, turning out barrels of shavings, cock-eyed rose trawlers, cradles that don't rock, for their daughters' dolls, roofs that don't quite cover their sons' birdhouses, and rustic chairs that only the Hunchback of Notre Dame could be comfortable in.

poor little rabbit that they couldn't possibly eat, then lit into it like lumberjacks.

"What's the most mysterious question in the world, Dad?" asked Hugh. Instead of mumbling "ask your mother," I decided to be a "pal." But I barely had my mouth hanging open to tell him that was a big question, when Kim shot the answer at him: "Who made God?" and shoved some more rabbit in her face. We both gave her a disgusted look but had no argument.

Within the next three minutes, Hugh, sensing my strange behaviour, had asked me: how many people I killed in the war; were there cavemen before Adam; and Eve, and if so, how come; what is a hygrometer; are there really 100 people born every minute in China. Kim wanted to know who Adam and Eve's mother and father were; are there really witches; why are boys so mean; did you kiss Mummy before you were married.

I felt like a Freudian case history. There was no recourse but to return to normal. "WELL, YOU KIDS SHUT UP AND EAT YOUR STEW!" I roared. Immediately the air cleared. Hugh started talking about Cubs. Kim about school. I picked up my paper and retreated into a shattered, but dignified silence.

One more weird slant women get from their favourite reading, and I'm through. It's home-building. They think the ideal house is a barn with a fireplace in one end and a couple of cubicles welded off at one side, to sleep in.

Maybe I'm Victorian, but in the old days, a house was an interesting place, with all sorts of nooks and crannies. Privacy was merely a matter of walking out of the room you were in, and disappearing. Father had a den, or study, where he could smoke a redolent pipe, read a western or detective while ostensibly doing something with his papers, having a snooze on the couch, or punish a crock.

In the modern home, you have less privacy than you have in a railway station. You get up from the table, move a few paces and you're in the living room. Everybody can see what everybody else is doing. But never mind. You're "together." And just to make sure nobody is excluded, you have a big picture window, so the neighbours across the street, who also have one, can be present, too. Ugh!
