WHAT COUNCIL DID

No Extra Water Here, Must Seek North Source: Engineer

If Georgetown wants large quantities of water above its present supply of two million gallons daily, the town will have to seek this out of town limits in the north, according to an engineering expert engaged by the town to make a study of present and future supplies.

Addressing council at the final meeting of the year on December 15th, Jack Kirk of International Water Supply, said his firm has found no new source in town, after a series of explorations. The present two wells are efficient and produce two million gallons daily, which is in excess of present demands. Both wells, he said, draw from a large reservoir which is replenished by rainfall, springs and the river. While it is possible to get three million gallons daily for short periods, this average could not be maintained over a year, and another well in the same location would serve no particular purpose in increasing the yearly water total.

He said he is not optimistic that a water supply discovered in the park area would be good for any protracted period. There is an underground reservoir there, he said, but he thinks it is limited in scope.

Creation of a conservation lake in the 9th Line area would be of help in recharging the town's present water source, he said, but the town would still be limited in the amount of water that could get in the reservoir to be pumped.

In a question and answer period following presentation of his firm's report, Mr. Kirk answered a variety of queries by councillors.

Q. Suppose a new industry might require half a million gallons a day?

A. You can't offer it. You don't have that much extra water unless you go to No. 8 well across from the old Wright farm on Main St. S. Q. Is there a supply of water in the park area?

A. There is a water reservoir but it seems limited and would be pumped dry in a short time.

Q. I was told by a farmer 3/4 miles away that town pumping in the vicinity of the new Park School had lowered his well.

A. Rainfall in the bush is the main source of water, in our opinion, but we will investigate and see what is there.

Q. Could we have a separate supply of industrial water which might not be suitable for general use.

A. We've had no experience with this in any community we've worked in.

Q. What is Georgetown's peak water supply?

A. If you added No. 6 and No. 8 wells you could have a peak of 3 million gallons daily in the summer months.

Q. Where can we find larger quantities of extra water?

A. I think you would have to go north for much extra supply. Perhaps, like Brampton, you will have to purchase land in an out-of-town watershed and seek your water there.

Quick Action Averts Sunday Fire at Arena

Prompt action of arena manager Ed Pries on Sunday morning averted what might have been a catastrophe at Georgetown arena.

Noticing smoke in the men's washroom, Mr. Pries discovered that a cigarette had been dropped and was able to quench the blaze himself before it got out of control. It is believed that a young lad smoking in the washroom was responsible. Mr. Pries later called Fire Chief Jack Harlow to make an inspection, to ensure that there was no danger of further fire.

The Georgetown and Halton poultry association made their annual draw for turkeys at their euchre party held in the Oddfellows Hall Saturday night, where thirteen Christmas dinners were given away during the evening's play. Hunters Real Estaters are breathing hot down the necks of the pace setting Bradford club after a pair of convincing wins during the weekend.

The Hunters tightened their hold on second place by surprising Milton 8 to 2 in Milton on Friday and then romping over Alliston 10-8 in their other away game on Monday. The locals have now won 5 of their last 6 and could be holding the league reins come '59.

Bill Chard sparked the club to their Alliston win scoring in every period. Chard and Wally Magdy tallied in the 2-all first period opposite Paul Meger and Schell for Alliston.

Georgetown possessed a 5-4 margin after 2 games. Chard again, Junior Beaumont and Jamie Cunningham for the Hunters, McCrone and Whiteside keeping it close, but the roof fell in in the third when Dave Irons netted a pair and Chard, Blake Inglis and Nick Ferri added singles to run the total to two figures. Bartlett picked up the solo Alliston goal of the period.

It was almost a carbon copy of the Milton game on Friday when the Hunters smothered the opposition with five markers in the last frame after struggling to hold a 3-2 edge at the end of two.

Ron Dixon and Beaumont accounted for four of the final total. Hewitt, Chard, Gerry Inglis and Irons got the others. Melanson potted both Milton markers.

Dave Joyce made his debut in the Milton game and contributed to both weekend wins, picking up three assists.

Fred Lawrence was in the local cage at Milton, Jack Rhodes at Alliston.

The Hunters points race of December 9th when it was last tallied showed Dixon and Blake Inglis in front with 16, Irons had 15, Cunningham 12, Chard 10, Varey 9, Beaumont 9, Hewitt 6, Magdy 5, Hall 4, Grasy 3, Gerry Inglis 2 and Ferri 2.

An indication of Georgetown's balance was reflected in the overall scoring when a local name didn't bob up until down around thirteenth even tho' the club was riding up around third at that time. Price of Milton was almost out of sight with 40 points, 15 ahead of his closest rival Spider Gibson of Bradford, who had 25.

Mayor Armstrong for his leadership during the year.

A defeated candidate in the elections, Cr. Sykes expressed his pleasure at serving as a councillor for three years.

"I wish every ratepayer could have this privilege," he said. "If they could learn as much about municipal affairs as I have in these three years, it would make the work of future councillors much easier."

Mayor Armstrong spoke his appreciation of the time and attention council has given to important decisions.

"We don't always agree and each councillor has voted as he thinks best, which is as it should be," he said. "But the important thing is whatever arguments we might have at the council table, we are friends outside."
