Arena TV Will Keep Fans Posted on NHL

Frank Mahalovich, George Armstrong, Fern Flaman, Bronco Horvath, and all the rest of the Leafs and Bruins will be in Georgetown Memorial Arena lobby Saturday night, thanks to a deal cooked up by the Hunter Realtors hockey club.

Fans torn between getting out and backing the Realtors in their fifth games of their Ontario semi-final series against Walkerton Capitals and staying home to watch Toronto and Boston go at each other on the tube have been offered a package deal by the Hunter hockey club which saves localites the torment of making a choice.

One and possibly two TV sets are being installed in the arena lobby for Saturday's game so that the customers may catch all of one game and at least part of the other by televiewing between periods of the Georgetown Walkerton clash, or, if they prefer vice versa.

Too much galloping back and forth, however, may dull the senses, so if you suddenly can't tell the difference between Mohs and Magdy; Chard becomes Chadwick, or Bud Varey, Udvari, sit tight and an attendant will be along to escort you from the arena.
