

Exhibit Map Shows Georgetown's Industrial Potential

MAYOR JACK ARMSTRONG points to Georgetown's industrial potential for Rex W. Heslop and William Willson, general manager of Metropolitan Toronto Industrial Commission at an exhibit in the Georgetown Industrial Exhibition which acquainted local people with products manufactured in the area. It shows Georgetown's location in the golden triangle which is becoming the hub of Canada's industry and has made communities like Georgetown grow out of the 'small town' stage of a decade ago.

Murray-McGill Wedding in Knox Presbyterian Church

Rev. A. J. Calder officiated at the marriage of Helen Margaret McGill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy McGill, 10 Church St. when she became the bride of Douglas Bruce Murray, Delhi, Ont. The ceremony took place in Knox Presbyterian Church on Saturday, September 5th at half past three. The church was decorated with pink and white gladioli.

The bride chose an afternoon length pure silk white gown with shoulder length veil held by matching spray head-dress. She carried white carnations and an orchid intertwined with ivy. Mrs. James Cleave was matron of honour in an afternoon length shell pink pure silk gown. She wore a matching headband and carried pink carnations intertwined with ivy. Robert McGill, brother of the bride acted as groom-man.

The wedding reception was held in Knox Church Hall where the bride's mother received for her in a delphinium blue gown, with matching feather hat and wearing a corsage of white mums. Mrs. Alex Murray, step mother of the groom was in a Nile green ensemble with coffee accessories. her corsage was of yellow roses. Mrs. George Ashfield, grandmother of the groom with whom he has lived in Georgetown at 5 Charles Street, assisted in receiving.

For travelling on their honeymoon to Northern Ontario the bride chose a royal blue wool suit with white feather hat and white gloves, black shoes and bag and she wore an orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Murray are residing at 32 Guelph Street. The groom is employed at Smith & Stone Limited and the bride at Alliance Paper Mills Ltd.
