Insurance Firm Now Partnership

JOHN R. BARBER

The local John R. Barber Agency has become a partnership with announcement by John R. Barber that J. Murray Henley of Toronto has joined the insurance firm.
Mr. Henley's entire business career has been spent in the insurance business, the past 14 years with Home Insurance, in Toronto. A Toronto native, presently living in Brantford, he plans to move to town with his wife and young son in the near future.
Mr. Barber, member of a family which goes back into Georgetown's early days, purchased the agency in 1950 from the late Elmer Thompson, as well as that of Freeman Kersey who will continue to be associated with the firm. It was established by Mr. Thompson in 1923.
Mr. Barber, graduated from the University of Toronto in 1927, and received his Master of Arts degree in Philosophy in 1929. For three years he was on the staff of Hart House Theatre, and in 1931 was elected a member of the Toronto Stock Exchange. He was a partner in Amos, Barber & Co. until 1938.
He served overseas with the Lorne Scots Regiment from 1941 until the end of the war, was later colonel of the Lorne Scots and is now an honorary lieutenant-colonel of the regiment. Mr. and Mrs. Barber live at 44 Market Street.

Ignore Office Safe Monday Break-in

Thieves completely ignored an office safe in a break and entry at a Colton Plastering Field Office on Raylton Crescent reported to police on Monday morning.
The office door was forced by a pine bar or screwdriver. The lock was bent and the door splintered. A filing cabinet door was forced, but nothing was apparently taken. Cpl. Jim Whitbrow made the investigation.

Diary of a Vagabond

BY DOROTHY BARKER

As the train wormed its way toward Central Station in Montreal, the dawn of a new day broke over the row upon row of three-storey triplexes. Only the rear porches are visible from a train window, and the enclosed stairways that look like do-it-yourself incinerator gutters, clumb crazily from the ground level to the topmost apartment.

Bits of washing, strung on a ragging line, are as familiar on these back porches as the usually dilapidated garden cans. This morning they looked like cardboard cutouts swaying stiffly in the early morning winter breeze. Tea towels, a pair of faded jeans, perhaps a child's sleeper, or a gaily striped flannel sheet are bleached by the frost and gain the sweet aroma that only clothes that are hung outdoors can boast.

As I watched the narrow streets slip by, running diagonally across the tracks, I thought all the saints in Heaven must have been immortalized by having Montreal streets named after them. St. Theresa, St. Cecile, St. Agnes and many more gave evidence that some sister of the Roman Catholic faith had been canonized for her virtue and her name perpetuated on the oblong enamel surface of a street sign.

I have come this way often during the past year and never cease to be fascinated by a little brown church, near the train tracks, tucked solidly between two structures of row housing. This morning as we rolled along at greatly reduced speed its cross, caked with ice glistened flaming red in the early rays of a rising sun. Just as we went by, the bell in its tower was tolling for early mass.

Nine hours by train from my home town and I was transported into, reputedly, the most cosmopolitan city on the North American continent. The course of Central Station commences at an early hour. The frustrating experience of having missed my train in Toronto now seemed merely an incident. I was caught up in the excitement of another adventure with a very deliberate plan for action.

Naturally my stomach had to call for attention. Breakfasting in the station restaurant is like attending a session of the United Nations. Above the clatter of dishes there is a constant hum of many tongues, though french is the one most frequently heard. Warmed by a good cup of coffee, my optimism was in high gear as I approached the ticket wicket to inquire whether the Toronto office had been able to change my reservations for the Maritimes. Yes, I was told, if I would accept a berth on the slower train.

I was not perturbed because it meant we would stop in Levis, during the early evening and I could gaze across the width of the great St. Lawrence River and review my Canadian history as I watched the towering cliffs of Quebec City during the thirty minute stop.
But before I got too mentally involved with trials and tribulations of Montcalm and Wolfe, I decided to take advantage of facilities provided for the traveller in the immaculate Central Station wash rooms. For fifty cents, I was provided with a fluffy towel, a large cake of soap and a private bathroom. For an hour I luxuriated in the scorching warmth of a bath, loosened my neck, applied my toothpaste with fresh vigour and changed into fresh lingerie.

Laymen Participate in Service at Knox Church

The service at Knox Presbyterian Church, Sunday, was conducted by representatives of "Presbyterian Men".
Taking part were Eric Beard of Norval, Jim Moore of York Memorial Presbyterian Church, Toronto, Bill Geigie of Georgetown and Alex Deans of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Humber Heights, who gave the address entitled "A Layman".
They were accompanied by a quartet, also representing "Presbyterian Men", Jack Nattress and Murray Stewart of Bolton, and Lorne Whitstone and Norm Black of Nashville. The men endeavoured to bring out the place, work and witness of a layman in the church.
