EDITORIAL COMMENT ...

Park Land is Important

Possibility of selling land for town-owned lots in Southern Heights for house building is linked with the possibility of selling open spaces as a source of funds for future parkland. The latter would be carefully studied with the council.

The lots in question were sold to the town by a private landowner who was demanded by the price of a large building plan.

Whether the present lots serve any useful purpose for the town is a matter which council must decide. The council is in a position to sell the lots for a price which would be used to purchase other land for parks and recreation. The town is in a position to sell the lots for a price which would be used to purchase other land for parks and recreation.

In this case, it would be better to sell the lots for a price which would be used to purchase other land for parks and recreation.

Tree Planting Needed

"Only God can make a tree," says a familiar song, but the tree is a gift from us humans if there are to be a permanent nature in the town.

Over half a century ago a group of far-sighted citizens performed a noble service for our town, planting the first trees in the town. As a result, we have a beautiful town. It is our duty to keep such a program going.

We owe it to the future generations to plant trees for the future. It is our duty to keep such a program going.

It is important that as a tree dies, it be replaced. A tree is a gift from us humans if there are to be a permanent nature in the town.

Don't Be Hasty

It is to be hoped that the decision of the Oakville Humane Society not to allow dogs to be kept in the town is a decision which will be made before it is too late.

The decision seems to hinge on finances. The Society says it cannot carry on without a sum of $2790 this year.

It feels it cannot afford more than $1900 for the service which, when largely confined to dog control, also makes facilities available for any animal problem which could occur in the town limits.

Residential Canvass Reports $5500 to Date

Georgetown residential canvass for the new hospital is going in high gear. At the first report meeting Monday night $5500 was donated or pledged.

Canvassers will continue their efforts this week to strengthen this division's total and bring the project closer to victory. Next report meeting will be held Monday night, 8:30 p.m. at the House Room in the Arena.

Among those canvassing for the building fund are: Jack Armstrong, Garry Alton, M. Armstrong, Mrs. Bernard Armstrong, Jack Bonnell, Bill Brown, Mrs. O. M. Brewster, W. M. Barrett, Mrs. Jean Brown, Mrs. J. Brick, William Bunch, Mrs. James A. Castigan, Dennis Cartwright, Mrs. D. Carter, Ivan Crabtree, R. Crawford, Mrs. Lorne Cox, Mrs. Wm. MOSCOW IS TO LAY OUT A GOLF COURSE IN THE SPRING FOR PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S VISIT

Controversial Corner

Doesn't Like Russian Politics But Education System Better

Having been confined to bed for two or three days with a medical ailment diagnosed in highly professional terms as the grippe, I was forced to spend a very busy week at home. At least it would have been relaxing had I been the only victim, wasted on bed and bed by my ailment.

Unfortunately, I was not the only member of the house. I had other members of the house. I had other members of the house. I had other members of the house.

ECHOES

From the pages of the Herald, March 20th, 1955

An exchange of ministers between the United Church, Georgetown, and the Landlaw Memorial Church, Hamilton, by which Rev. B. W. Hamley, HD, will go to Hamilton and Rev. F. C. Overend, BA, will come to Georgetown has been announced.

ERROR IN HISTORY

Reporting the birthday celebration of Lt. Col. Alex Noble recently, the Herald erred in saying he lives in the home built by his father.

The Noble residence was actually built by Alex McNabb in 1856. A wing was added by Major Mitchell in the early sixties, and it was in 1888 that Colonel Noble's father became owner of the house.

Doesn't Like Russian Politics But Education System Better

There are few truly, few in essentials and lots of hard work. There can be left doubt that the best some brains in Russia are being used to utilize what many of our most prominent young men and women in our country are doing a job far beyond their political horizon.

MERRY MENAGERIE

Sugar and Spice

Discovered by BILL BAILEY of the Toronto Star

Every St. Patrick's Day I try to write a column about the Irish. And every year, I give it up as a bad job. What can you say about the Irish, good or bad, that they have not already said about themselves, being the greatest talkers and writers on the face of the earth?

About ninety-four per cent of this talking and writing is pure Irish blather, but the remainder is as fine and true as anything that has come from tongue or pen.

I'm no authority on the Irish, and I promise that anyone who finds a single "begorrah" in this column may consider me with a leprechaun. But he believes, as a student of the highways and byways, the gods and soda, to peer through the fog, and squelch through the bog, in an honest effort to find the real essence of the Irish.

Fortunately for the cause of pure research, there are hoards of genuine authorities on Ireland and the Irish. They are all Irishmen, of course. No nation on earth has found itself so fascinating as the Irish. No people has ever examined itself with such unflinching detail, such hopeless disgust.

Most of the confusion about the Irish must rest with their writers. The brooding, turbulent, hilarious, soaring language of their poets, story tellers and dramatists has tumbled into our ken an Irishman who is half man, half myth, half clown, half hero.

If we listed all the fine things the Irish have to say about themselves, we'd have them down as: loyal to the death; witty as all hell; fun-loving; kind-some; deeply religious; sensitive; and with a fine disdain for the material things of life to mention only a few self-bestowed virtues.

And if we listed all the sorry things Irishmen call themselves, we'd put down: cowardly, treacherous, simple minded, morose, ugly as sin, deeply profane, and with a fine disdain for the material things of life to mention only a few self-bestowed virtues.

At the expense of repetition we would like to state:

Q. What is the general plan for the new Georgetown and District Memorial Hospital?

A. In the interests of approximately 16,000 people in the Georgetown district, this new hospital in the community is needed to look after the health of its citizens, the terminal illnesses of its aged, to provide emergency treatment, to make early diagnosis, to treat cases within its scope, to provide convalescent care and rehabilitation service as required.

Q. How many Georgetown people now have to go to hospitals elsewhere?

A. Every year well over one thousand people from Georgetown are cared for in Brampton and Guelph Hospitals alone. Other people travel to more distant points. But hospitals in the region are already greatly overburdened. In the Guelph General, for instance, the Georgetown patients — 35 or more at one time — frequently outnumber those from any other community outside of Guelph itself.

Q. Why should giving to the Building Fund concern everybody throughout Georgetown, Acton, and the northern two-thirds of Etobicoke Township?

A. This is the district to be served. One in every seven people here will need the help of a hospital in the course of one year. Right now, no hospital is located here. But the health of these people is important to every business and resident. No one — certainly not the one in seven — would want to be denied the opportunity to help remedy the lack of immediate hospital protection.

Q. Will the new hospital duplicate the highly specialized services afforded by large city hospitals?

A. No. In Georgetown, as in other communities, 90 per cent of illness does not require the highly specialized services afforded by a large city hospital. The Georgetown Plan is economical because it does not call for highly technical equipment and highly specialist personnel. The relatively small percentage of difficult cases will be referred to other institutions for special care and treatment.

Q. Is the Georgetown district populous enough to require its own hospital?

A. Yes. Here's a partial list of Ontario municipalities comparable that are safeguarded by public general hospitals:

AJAX (Pickering) MIDLAND
ARNBRIOR NEWMARKET
BOWMANVILLE ORANGEVILLE
COLLINGWOOD PARRY SOUND
FORT ERIC PENETANGUISHENY
FORT FRANCES PERTH
GATINEAU PORT HOPE
GODFRICH REXBURG
HAWKESBURY SIMCOE
INGERSOLL SMITHS FALLS
KEMPTVILLE L'AMBERG
LEAMINGTON WALLACEBURG
LINDSAY

Q. Can this smaller-sized hospital be run economically?

A. Yes. It is anticipated that revenues from the care of patients and other income will be sufficient to balance foreseen operating costs. Hospitals are not business enterprises, but Georgetown's hospital will be run on a businesslike basis, as efficiently and economically as possible.

Q. What steps are being taken to reduce maintenance costs?

A. In the floor plan, the surgical, out-patient and central supply departments are closely integrated so as to reduce staffing needs. The admitting office is strategically located so that one person on night duty can watch over both main entrance and ambulance entrance. Certain services, such as pathology and radiology, will be shared with another hospital at a saving to both. And part-time help will be used where possible.

Q. How will the new hospital be staffed?

A. Negotiations are now going forward to arrange for a staff comprising 50 to 55 full-time employees and 10 to 15 part-time employees. Residents of the district who have previous hospital or nursing training or experience are being considered as employees.

Q. May I visit relatives and friends when they are patients in the new hospital?

A. Yes. Hospital visiting hours will be scheduled for convenient times. You will find that visiting is more easily arranged at a hospital close at hand. Patients, too, will welcome this advantage.

Q. When will the new hospital be opened to patients?

A. As soon as the required funds are raised, the construction completed and the staff assembled. All going well, at the earliest possible date in 1961.
