Industrial Report Predicts Growth Trend Of The 60's

A report entitled "Ontario Industrial Development," which reviews the growth and development of the manufacturing industry during the decade of the fifties and, in the light of this development, predicts the shape and growth trends of the 1960s has been released by the Hon. W. M. Mackie, Minister of Planning and Development, and D. E. Holland, acting director of the Trade and Industry Branch.

In addition to outlining the growth trends in the various industrial sectors, the 76 page report summarizes developments in other sectors of the Canadian and Ontario economies upon which the Province's manufacturing industry is dependent. It reviews and forecasts developments in the population, growth, with an increased accent on youth, the changing labour force, current and future demands in domestic and foreign markets and capital investment intentions in all sectors of the economy.

The Report lists the new manufacturing industries established in Ontario during 1959, and expansions carried out by resident industry both at new locations and at sites. Ontario gained 146 major, new manufacturing industries in 1959, a 70 per cent increase over the 86 industries that located in the Province in 1958, and the largest number recorded by the Trade and Industry Branch in a single year during the past decade. Another 55 manufacturing industries expanded new locations by opening branch plants, while 574 firms undertook major expansions at site — representing increases

EUROPE AND THE UNITED KINGDOM

WHISKED BY RCAF COMET JET TO EUROPE

Striking through the 4,000 feet above the clouds and weather in an RCAF Comet 1A jet toward Europe, we headed for our rendezvous with the Canadian army after 15 years. At the efficient RCAF passenger terminal at L'Epine, Ottawa, we had our first glimpse of the sleek Comet that was to whisk us to Marville, France, in eight and a half hours flying time. Arriving ready, we checked through and watched the other passengers.

We were a mixed lot of 30 of us, reminded of a combined ops phone. Navy, Army and Air Force, and civilian. Armed forces men were going over on rotation or completing special assignments at National Defence Headquarters in Ottawa. The civvies were going over to teach school at RCAF base in France, while we were to report on Canada's NATO forces for the Ontario Weekly Newspapers Association.

We sat opposite Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Harris from North York, Toronto, who were thrilled to be heading for Metz. Mr. Harris was to take over the principalship of an RCAF school — he was an education officer with the tax boys in the Far East in World War II. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Fourbester of Vancouver were on their fourth plane in three days heading for a similar post at Metz.

As we waited, we watched if we were lucky. Three men came up to us and chatted about where we could have met. Among them was Major J. W. Bryan returning to London after two weeks at NDHQ with Mrs. Bryan and family he lives at South Wimbledon. We compared notes but couldn't decide where our paths had crossed during World War II. He was First Day and we were Third Day. "The Water Race" but we'll remember the next time we meet, for Major Bryan was a wonderful help, especially on the trip to England.

What an experience! This trip really was. Breakfast at 17,000 feet at 3 a.m., four times with the sun shining brightly — two hours at Marville, France, where we dropped onto the runway exactly on schedule at 11:10 a.m., French time. A taxi-hour flight in a Dakota of World War II vintage to the RCAF base at Langar, near Nottingham, England, was followed by a three-hour train ride to St. Pancras station in North London. Pre-arranged army transport was not in sight, so Major Bryan commandeered a Royal Navy vehicle which wheeled us through the winding, busy streets of Old London to Morden in the southwest, where we rejoined our family whose BOAC Britannia had left Dorval, Montreal, 24 hours ahead of our Comet.

As our Comet was prepared for the takeoff at 8 p.m., after we had been served off by Capt. Ingram of the Army PRO staff, P. L. Duwayne McIride, of Vancouver, announced in his quiet, reassuring manner, that he was in charge and we would be flying at 24,000 feet to Gander. At 9:40 he reported we were over the southern tip of the Gaspé Peninsula, and would be in Gander in an hour.

In our first jet flight we mar-

Brings Churchville Bride To Elmlawn Farm, R.R. 4

Churchville United Church was the scene of the marriage of Heather Ann Hutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Hutton, 111 St. Streetville, when she became the bride of Donald Cleave, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. LaVerne Thompson, R.R. 4, Georgetown. Rev. J. P. Ashwin conducted the double ring ceremony assisted by Rev. G. L. Royal of Naval Standards of pink taffeta with full elbow length sleeves, full skirts and heavy white lace cummerbunds faced with pink velvet ribbon. Their hats were small of white lace flowers and veiling their accessories were white. Each carried a bouquet of blue delphinium and white carnations.

Donald Cleave, Norway, was the groomsmen and Gordon Coyne, brother-in-law of the groom, and Roger Hutton, brother of the bride, were ushers.

The wedding reception was held on the lawn of Mapleburn Farm, home of the bride, where the bride's mother received for her in a deep sky blue sheath of silk organza over taffeta with lace appliques with a matching hat and white accessories and a mauve orchid corsage. She was assisted by the mother of the groom in a powder blue two piece ensemble of lace marquette with white accessories and a corsage of two pink baby orchids.

For their Eastern Coast honeymoon, the bride chose a white linen two piece gown, white accessories with a mauve scarf to match the mauve or child. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will live at Elmlawn Farm, R.R. 4, Georgetown.

WORDS OF THE WISE

Beware prejudices. They are like rats, and men's minds are like traps, prejudices get in easily, but it is doubtful if they ever get out. — Lord Jeffrey

Before you install any type of automatic heating in your home, why not "ask the man who chose gas." We're confident most of the answers will sound like this:

- "Cleanest fuel ever"
- "Dependable—even in the severest weather"
- "— the records prove natural gas is the safest automatic heating fuel"
- "Quiet as a kitten"
- "Costs no more than other automatic fuels"
- "Heating payments are easy — I distribute them evenly over a 10 month period from September to June"
- "If you need service — it's free"

Now is a good time to install natural gas automatic heating equipment. No down payment — no charges 'til September and be sure to ask how you can receive a big $50.00 allowance.
