A new polio vaccine, developed by Dr. Jonas Salk, requires no needle. It is a live, attenuated vaccine that is administered orally.

The vaccine is made from a strain of poliovirus that has been weakened so that it cannot cause disease. It is administered in the form of a liquid that is swallowed.

The vaccine is safe and effective. It has been shown to protect against the disease of poliomyelitis.

The vaccine is available in many parts of the world. It is being distributed in Canada by the Canadian government.
