Seek 9th Line Access

Georgetown Council, through Halton M.P., Sam Hall, is seeking an audience with Minister of Highways Cass to state the town's case for a 9th Line access road to 401 Highway.

There is a growing feeling in town that the town's industrial future would brighten if such a road were created. And Toronto commuters are solidly behind such a plan which would give them a shorter drive to work.

Decide to contact the Minister was made at Monday's council meeting.

Another question of highways that is proposed on the 2nd Line Chinaman, which would parallel the nearby No 10 also has council's interest.

A letter was sent to the Minister pointing out that the new highway should be closer to Georgetown, where it would also serve as a traffic artery to town.

To date Paul has avoided the chopping block and by all appearances will stick with the Junior Club. He played junior hockey last year for Brumpton.

Scarborough Resident Ratepayers Ask This For Nomination Meeting

Scarborough Resident Rotary Car Winner

A lucky car draw in which the local and Eastwood Rotary clubs combine to raise funds for a year concluded on Wednesday when the winner was drawn at a Rotary meeting in Eastwood.

Scarborough resident Ernie Beak is winner of the Pontiac offered as a prize. The winning ticket seller George Knigh, R.R. 2, Blakewell, will be driving a new Pontiac for his part in the draw.

In town, the club is concur-ting on plans for the annual dinner party for senior citizens and is seeking names of men and women 70 years and over who will be guests at this year's annual event.

Ratepayers Ask This For Nomination Meeting

Perhaps seemed to be the answer when Ian Brown, representing Delta Ratepayers, as a prior request of have council's reports printed and distributed at nomination meeting, motion which the neighbouring county passed recently.

Mayor Hyde told him that no such action has been taken to date, but that council will be discussing it.

Council as a unit could take no action of this type, the mayor pointed out, and it would have to be up to each individual councillor to decide whether he favours such a plan.

The ratepayers group feels that much time is wasted at the meeting by reading committee reports and that if printed ones were available there would be more time for meaningful discussion to appear on the platform.

It is doubtful whether Georgetown will have a representative at a civil defence conference in Amherst for four days in November.

A booking was made last Friday in the name of Mr. John Elliott, who had indicated he might be able to attend, but on Monday the councillor expressed doubt that he could.

"It's hard for councillors to take time off when there are so many working men serving in municipal posts today," remarked Cr. Ian Cass.

Cr. Ian Cass said that if a council member goes to a convention he should be compensated for expenses, including the fares, to come back to town.

Mayo Hyde said that this would be discussed in committee, too, as well as matter affecting Main St. and a recent decision had been made by the personnel manager of Standard Products.

Other councillors felt that even if this happened it would be a cheap way of getting the work done.

Council's okayed Shultz St. action with the proviso that the town engineer would have to make sure weather is suitable otherwise the sidewalks would have to wait until spring.

IN HOLES NEXT YEAR

Predict Georgetown Golf Top Course at Presentation Night

"With the opening of the remaining nine holes next season, The Georgetown Golf and Country Club will have one of the top courses in southern Ontario." The statement was made by Griff Adamson, chairman of the board of directors of the Georgetown club when he addressed the club membership, fellow directors and their wives at the club's closing banquet and presentation night.

Also speaking briefly were Alf Sykes who proposed the toast to The Queen, president Norm Marchant, and ladies president Mrs. Simpson. Other members of the board of directors, fellow directors and their wives at the club's closing banquet and presentation night.

Ghosts fell apart at the seams, watches let their caps and saw their pointed hats collapse like so many soft ice cream cones. Pirates drew their cutlasses and held a limp tenth of saturated cardboard while clowns gazed sadly in the mirror as their smiles dropped off the tip of their chin.

But the braver breed of gobblers made the rounds anyway while inside, the dry, half dressed cautious types pressed their noses against soaped windows and watched the little parades in the rain with mixed emotions.

But it's an ill downpour that doesn't precipitate some benefit, and Monday night's drizzle was no exception.

The pelting raindrops had the effect of a police pose on would be vandals who stayed home. The local police force and members of the fire department were on duty at strategic points however, to further discourage senseless damage.

Meanwhile the over-stock of candy kisses will occupy a prominent spot on everyone's living room table until next February.
