Dedicated Men on the Job -

Ywenty years of political reporting in Georgetown has given us a healthy respect for the men who serve as councillors.

We have sat in our reporter's chair a pood share of our Monday evenings for the pad fow years - and before that in the once a month days, when council business was not as varied, Hough juries important.

And we are not mouthing a platitude when we say that only on rare on as ons have we seen a local member who was one sincere, did not put his very best into trie job, and should not be congratulated by the sowiepsople for what can be at the same hms; a Hunkless and rewarding position

Indian Relics Tell Story Of Halton's Early Settlers

By Roy Downs in the Millen Champian

The third in a series of articles tracing same of the interesting history that could well form the foundation of a Halton County Museum where the history of Ontario's fastest grawing county may be properly displayed to local residents and visitors,

The village was situated on a flat plateau of sandy soil with a large bank all around it, where the ashes and refuse of the village was thrown into pits and burned. Five of these ash pits were found also a sixth, where the bones of animals and py. A full length feature 'Alice broken artifacts and potters were thrown. The area was well watered by a spring creek, making an ideal site for the Indians

Inside the large one were 12 completed showed over 3400 or 13 postholes for the bunk type beds and a four foot avenue or aisle running from one end of the crude building to the other. Six brepits used for cooking were found, one firepit for each Besides the other longhouses, John found three tee pee type homes, probably covered with bark or skin. The largest was 18 feet in diameter and had three firepits -- two for cooking an

Small Firepits

To the east of the main camp area were small firepits but custom of putting lighted can no longhouse or tee pees. These pits were in a natural amphitheatre and it appeared as if this was the village's counsel area. The whole site covered between four and five acres and would probably have accommodated about 175 villagers Other camputes uncovered would take up as much as 10.

15 and even 20 acres: Some villages, he discovered, are older than others. Trada with the whites started around the yearers 1600 or 1610 and some villages showed signs of trade with the whites. One camp, however, seemed to be founded around the 1200s.

Their art amazes him. "It's all a cross-section of the way of life, and I appreciate the way their artistic ideas came to life through their clay and stone," says the collector. He says they found great artistic outlets through the manufacture of their pines and pottery.

Pieces of Wampum

His collection contains too many articles to name here however, in it one finds a beautiful comb, many pieces of wampum, heads, flint and arrowheads, broken pottery, axeheada, tomahawks, knives, even a pair of crude selssors and an awl for leather working. The pipes are amazing, with short stems and artistically-designed bowls depicting human and animal

And the owner is just as fascinating. He also collects old guns, does beautiful ornamental iron work, carves wood like a master, loves hunting and snowshoeing, and is enough of a wine connoisseur that he sometimes makes his own.
