

Halton Member Speaks During Budget Debate

Synopsis of Speech in the House of Commons by Alexander Best, M.P. Halton County, during the budget debate, Tuesday, January 17, 1961.

The recent supplementary budget has had a number of beneficial effects. It was a national rather than a strictly nationalistic budget, a budget that was pro Canadian and not anti American. One of its most important effects was that of bringing the Canadian dollar closer to par with the United States dollar. Increased depreciation of certain industrial plants and aid to university students and their parents in the taxation field, were important accomplishments about which I have had numerous letters in the past from Halton County.

The recent Liberal rally in Ottawa puzzled many Canadians. The Leader of the Opposition talked about the consolidation of positions on the platform, but it is most difficult to find out what position or platform were taken. Very little was said about Agriculture for instance and evidently discussions on fiscal policy were not conclusive.

In the matter of defence, the Liberals have evidently switched their line. While supporting manned interceptors for the last few years, they have now come out definitely against them. Withdrawal from NORAD, an organization which they partly developed, is also in their platform. It remains for Canadians to judge if positions of pacifism and isolation are the wishes of this country.

There are three specific measures that I would hope that the Government and Cabinet would consider in the future. Firstly some additional support of the Royal Society of Canada which, at the present, has offices in the National Research Council Building. This Society could be strengthened by provision of a building of its own. Secondly, the establishment of an Agricultural Research Council to assist in co-ordination, and in the liaison, between Federal and Provincial Agricultural Research bodies. Thirdly, the instituting at some time in the future of a cabinet minister for science, to whom would be responsible the various research councils, Atomic Energy of Canada and possibly other organizations. This would provide directly at Cabinet level an important channel where the results of scientific work and information would be known.

(Ed. Note — The complete context of Mr. Best's budget speech as reported in Hansard will appear in a future issue.)

Fire Prevention is Topic at Meeting

By J. A. F.

At the Annual Meeting of the Halton Farm Safety Council held recently in Milton, fire prevention was selected as one of the main programmes for 1961.

Chairman J. H. Taylor announced that the programme would centre around Fire Prevention, and safety measures in the event of a fire. The problem of fire hazards on Halton County farms is not seasonal. At all times of the year the danger of fire is present.

Estimate Quarter Million Damage in Hays Fire

Fire early Saturday destroyed the internationally known Hays Sales Barn, near Palermo, causing loss estimated at more than $250,000.

Fifty head of prize Holstein cattle valued at more than $30,000 were lost.

Among the lost cattle were three bulls and a heifer valued at $2,000 each, which were to be shipped to Cuba, and 40 head slated for shipment to Mexico.

The fire was first noticed by two Trafalgar Township police officers, Sgt. Nelson Sherwood and Detective Roy Heter, who noticed flames flicking through the roof of the main barn as they drove along No. 5 Highway on cruiser patrol.

The officers radioed the alarm and roused the farm's general manager, Leslie Millington, and his family. They then raced to the barn's office building adjoining the burning barn and escorted May Robertson, a farm employee, to safety.

Firefighters from Trafalgar Township brigade arrived at the scene in a matter of minutes, but flames were raging by then.

Fire Chief George Wright said there was not enough water available to fight the flames. He believed the safest action was to prevent spread of the fire to two homes located on the property.

Mr. Millington said the fire was probably started in the hayloft of the main barn. It was probably caused by a short circuit in the wiring he said.

Two stacks of baled hay, weighing more than 300 tons and valued at more than $7,000 added to the fire.

The flames were visible for several miles. Both the Trafalgar and Oakville Township police departments were flooded with calls reporting the fire, some from points 30 miles distant from the fire.

The Hays Sales arena is best known on a world scale for its Holstein sales. Its owner, Thomas Hays was enroute to Argentina with a load of cattle at the time of the fire.

The buildings were destroyed 90 minutes after the alarm was sounded.

United Nations Group Would Ban Nuclear Arms

Foreign-charged atmosphere, a resolution recommending the immediate renunciation by Canada of the possession by Canadian military forces of nuclear weapons was passed Thursday night at a panel discussion and open forum, sponsored by the United Nations Association for Peel County.

The resolution urged the adoption of measures to ensure that such devices shall not be installed or stored on Canadian soil.

The meeting, chaired by the Hon. J. Tamblin, treasurer of the United Nations Association, was held in the South Peel Unitarian Church.

The panelists were Mr. Howard Adelman, the president of the Combined Universities campaign for nuclear disarmament, Col. Conover of Brampton, well known ex-C.O. of the Lorne Scots, Rev. C. A. Forrest, editor of the United Church Observer, and minister of Port Credit United Church, and John Pallett, M.P. for Peel County.

Both Mr. Pallett and Rev. Forrest took the position that the weapons were necessary as deterrents, although everything should be done to ensure they were never used.

Col. Conover felt the question should be that of Canada's renouncing war altogether, but if this were not done, we should have nuclear weapons in order to compete on an equal basis.

Mr. Adelman emphatically protested Canada's sharing in any nuclear involvement. He felt that a Canada renouncing nuclear weapons could become a leader for peace. Simply hoping for disarmament wasn't enough, he felt Canada should show the way with decisive action.

He added that financially Canada could not compete anyway. It would be much better, in his opinion, for our efforts to be directed towards preventing the spread of nuclear arms to smaller nations, since the know-how is no longer restricted to few.
