RIDIN' HERD ON "REALLY BIG SHEW"

THE LIONS ARE ROARING about their upcoming western extravaganza and their promotion is apparently justified. The Rodeo is just a little over three weeks away and the energetic organizers have put together another entertaining program thanks to a fine choice of committee heads and hard toiling committees. Above are Jim Jones, chairman of the promotion, and advertising, Wilf Brisbois, chairman of the Grounds Committee, general secretary Alex Blackwell, and general chairman Bob Brick.

Wynfield Horse Auction Intrigues This Reporter

"A horse, a horse, a kingdom for a horse," cried Henry IV, but "$860 for a horse" was the cry of a Montreal man, who bought the top-priced horse at an auction on Roy Ionsen's Wynfield stock farm Monday afternoon. The horse, owned by George Coverdale of Campbellville was a registered quarter horse yearling filly.

A solid line up of cars, parked on both sides of the 17th sidewalk, stretched for seven tenths of a mile in front of the farm, with license plates from New York, Quebec and Ont. Walking into the auction is like walking into another world. Cowboy hats and tight levis seem to be the uniform. In the big barn filled with the high pitched sound of the sing-song, unintelligible rattle of the auctioneer's voice bouncing back from microphone to the corrugated metal walls and back. Presumably auctioneer Glen Anderson, of Elmville, was calling out bids, but any resemblance to normal language was purely coincidental.

Like Mandrake A fascinating man walked around the ring gesturing hypnotically at the crowd like Mandrake the Magician. With hands clasped to one side, always in close to his body, and hands and fingers outstretched, he opened and wheedled bids from onlookers who may have had no intention of bidding. Periodically Roy Ionsen, standing beside the auctioneer would yell 'Yeah,' and throw his arm up in the air. The first time he did it, your reporter

Think Town Pays Too Big A Share

Georgetown is paying too much towards costs of the old North Halton high school district and the town high school board drew this to council's attention in a letter recently.

When the district was disbanded in favour of three new areas, costs were assessed by the county to continue payment for schools built in Georgetown, Acton and Milton.

Georgetown's assessment has increased more rapidly than the other four municipalities involved, and council will approach the county to revise the basis of charges made.
