Mr. and Mrs. Mac Alexander have returned home to Norval after a week's vacation in the Eastern United States. Mr. Alexander who is a licensed judge of the American Milk Goat Records Association, acted as judge at the Schaghticoke Fair in eastern New York State. While in the U.S.A. the Alexanders visited the Marlon Jersey Farms, which is stocked with one of the prize Jersey herds in the world. Located at Suffern, N.Y., the farm raises Angus cattle, goats and black pigs which are shipped to South America, where they are in great demand because, unlike the white variety, they are not susceptible to sunburn. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander visited with Mr. and Mrs. Tyler, formerly of Oakville, at their farm which supplied milk from 100 goats to New York City each day. They also saw large scale "natural farming" projects, "Bio-Dynamic Farm at Spring Valley and "Five Hills Organic Farms" in Pennsylvania, which has a huge plant for publications which advocate preventive medicine and natural or organic farming methods. While staying in Glenn Falls, N.Y., with one of the fair directors, the Alexanders paid a visit to the nearby Petrified Sea, reputed to contain some of the oldest samples of algae and other sea life yet discovered by man.

A family gathering was held at the home of Mrs. Henry Isley, R.R. 1, Limehouse, on Sunday, July 8th, to celebrate her eightieth birthday, which falls on the 12th. There were forty-six in attendance. Guests were present from Fordwich, Breslau, Preston, Toronto, Orangeville, Guelph and Georgetown.

Church, Red Cross Were Her Activities

One of Georgetown's older residents, Mrs. James Ballantine, 78, died in Georgetown Hospital on June 26th. Daughter of the late William and Mary Jane Foster Barber, she was the former Mary Elizabeth Barber and was born at Both Jersey herds in the world. Located at Suffern, N.Y., the farm raises Angus cattle, goats and black pigs which are shipped to South America, where they are in great demand because, unlike the white variety, they are not susceptible to sunburn. CORRECTION

An unfortunate error occurred in a story on the front page of last week's Herald when a few lines of type were misplaced.

The item concerned former mayor Hyde's answer to a rate payer, who had criticized the rate of phone conversations for use as evidence in a recent court case.

The middle paragraph of the item, when lines were put in proper order, would read: "Hyde and Emmerson had been 'in' on the original recording of an office conversation between Mr. Hyde and Rex Heston, he said, and his brother and Elliott had been informed before the second recording was made."
