Rural Ontario Answer To Province Expansion

The industrial and manufacturing crisis affecting rural Ontario shows no geographical favoritism at the borders - and in every area where there is thought for optimism, there is an equal distribution of pessimism for the future.

Along the eastern shores, touching the St. Lawrence Waterway, slicing north and then back, and finally through the Ottawa Valley, the picture and the statistics are the same. Good communities and poor communities.

But all through the province, the same universal complaint - a tight wedge and vice of metro domination.

Unequal tax distribution and insufficient diversification of industry. However, at government level, there is at least one cabinet minister who has progressed far beyond the speech making stage. There is one man who is preparing to do

- by telephane. Lots of folks set a regular time for calling and keeping up on the news. And more often than not this time is on a Sunday or after 6 p.m. when station-to-station rates are lower. Remember too that after 9 p.m. any evening you get double value on station-to-station long distance calls of 10 minutes or more within Ontario and Quebec under our Night Economy Plan. So be sure to call often. The pleasure is big and the cost is small - a lot smaller than you think - when you keep in touch by telephone.
