TREE HOUSE (OF THE AUGUST MOON)
"MAYBE WE SHOULD HAVE designed an escalator," thinks Pete Young, 10 Shelley St. and Vana Mikoleit, 13 Shelley St. As they look eastward from the clapboard canopy in the limbs of an old elm tree behind their homes. The tree house was constructed last year with the assistance of Pete's dad and the boys find it a perfect fort in the event of very frequent snowball wars. The tree house but shelters the dwellers from the pelting of over ripe apples from the neighbouring orchard which become the enemy's seasonal ammunition. During a storm, the shack is secluded enough to be a perfect spot for a young man's meditations. A good hiding place. A lookout, that's their tree house. Wonder if it's zoned R10.
