NO PALM TREES, BUT . . .

THE POOL IS AN OASIS

SWIMMERS RETURNING to their favourite body of water made their comebacks via two routes Saturday some plunged straight into beckoning aqua while others exhibited self-restraint and walked around to the diving board where, like the boy above, they entered the water with a dash of showmanship.

LOOKING FOR ALL THE WORLD like a scene from Lawrence of Arabia, this picture of towel-wrapped bathers and others absorbing the sun take a breather on the deck at the edge of the pool. They're part of the record crowd of 706 that passed through the gate opening day.

Little Theatre Chooses Ron Hunt as President

Wednesday, June 5th, was election night for the Georgetown Little Theatre Group at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Fisher, 69 Edward St.

Although perhaps the fever pitch may not have been as high or publicized as much, as other elections — this was not without its share of hope among those who attended.

The meeting commenced at 8:30 p.m. and, candidates' names having already been submitted to the nominating committee, voting commenced as soon as the minutes had been dealt with.

Selection and election of officers is not an easy task when the choice has to be made from such an enthusiastic group.

The results, though, appear to have been acceptable to all and are as follows:

President, Ron Hill; vice president (plays and directors), Tony Lloyd; vice president, (workshops and special events) Bill Barratt; secretary, Fran Tkachuk; treasurer, Gordon Hunt.

Upon acceptance, the new president, thanked the previous executive for the past activities, plus an outline of hopeful ideas for the future.

The public cannot fully appreciate the amount of research, labour, and time that goes into each individual production. All this by a voluntary group which is endeavouring to bring good entertainment, with a high standard of acting, on to the local stages, played by local people.

So whether it is another 'The Curious Savage,' 'Deadwood Dick,' or some more 'Dirty Work at the Cross Roads' support them by attending their forthcoming efforts.

Anyone who may be interested in this group's activities, may contact any of the executives named above — or phone TR. 7-4642 for information.

Says 12 a.m. Is Noon . . Or Is It?

June 10, 1963

Dear Sir

By this time, no doubt someone has consulted a reference or encyclopedia providing a clarification of the term 12:00 A.M. or P.M. Failing such an authority, a simple logical approach can be applied to obtain an explanation.

First, the term A.M. or P.M. would by definition exclude 12:00 A.M. or P.M. as meaning less since A.M. or ante-meridian means before the sun reaches its meridian and P.M. (post meridian) means after. Therefore, to apply these terms to the time when the sun is exactly at its meridian is a contradiction and this time has been arbitrarily set at 12:00 o'clock.

Since the problem as presented in your editorial occurred through the actual use of the term, it can only be concluded that such usage must require a subjective interpretation. Thus, we can never be sure just what the user meant by 12:00 A.M. We can, however, attempt to rationalize his thinking as follows.

We normally accept time as a linear flow of events and hence measure its passage by assigning numbers in simple arithmetic progression. The earth's rotation, on the other hand, is a cyclic event and consequently, application of our method of linear measurement to a cyclic phenomena results in an ambiguity. Although there is no real starting point in a cycle event (such as a clock) it is usually accepted that shortly after midnight is the start of the daily cycle. Thus, it is natural to assign the lowest numbers to the arithmetic progression to the arbitrarily selected event. Based on this reasoning 12:00 A.M. would appear to be the largest number in the progression and therefore, to make it describe 12:00 noon than 12:00 midnight of the previous day. The argument is only slightly weakened by the fact that we do not start the day at 00:01 hours as do the military services for example, but at 12:01 resulting in 12:59 as the largest number in the progression.
