Over on Moultrie Crest such thick piece of pyrex think there is a banker with stars in it of the thickness of your pyrex his eyes. Before there is a stamp-ovenware, then you realize one peep over there for loans, it's much as pretty thick. Pyrex is the stars and planets he has in used in the lens for the same reason it is used in cooking.

William Burt of 44 Moultrie Crest temperature change has no effect in the daytime assistant manager of the International Department in Toronto's high rise building, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce on King St. at night, makes telescopes to view the universe.

With all the caniness of both a banker and a Scotsman, he has just finished a 6" reflector telescope, with a magnifying power of three hundred and fifty, at a cost of $25. This is the idea I'd make them one wanted to see if I could do it for $25. The grinding of the lens is as I expected but it took a lot of patience and endurance. The lens begins as a one inch

Georgetown Cousins are Attendants Acton Wedding

St. Alban's Anglican Church, Acton, were decked with pink and white gladioli for the wedding on Saturday of Miss Margaret Davison and John Reginald Hoare.

Rev. D. H. West solemnized the double-ring ceremony uniting the daughter of Mrs. Olive Davison, 146 Wynford Place, Acton, and the late George Davison and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald M. Hoare, 291 Arthur St., Acton. Mrs. Betty Oakes, the church organist, played the wedding music.

Mr. Eric Davison escorted his niece down the church aisle. She wore a traditional long white gown of organza over-tailor styled with a rounded neckline and long, pointed sleeves. The skirt featured controlled fullness with inverted pleats flowing into a chapel train at the back.

A small front-bow and a rose bow at the back accentuated the banded waistline of the fitted bodice which was sprinkled with chauntilly lace appliques. The same trim cascaded down the front of the skirt. A wedding ring pillow gowned with pearls and rhinestones held the bride's fingertip veil of French silk illusion bordered with chauntilly lace. She carried red roses and white pom-pom chrysanthemums in a cascade arrangement with feather fern.
