Halton Mother Pleads Better Retarded School

A special appeal has been made by the Minister of Education for more provincial assistance for the retarded children in Halton County. Margaret E. Kelly, mother of three school age children has urged Education Minister William Davis to consider a better training program through special classes or even a special school if necessary.

In a letter to Mr. Davis she said the three boys are of no value if a person cannot clean a floor, hold an egg or repair a lock to enable him to make a living.

"Their intelligence is above the level of their Ontario Association for Retarded Children School," she stated in her letter.

Mrs. Kelly suggested that Halton County should have a school similar to Edith Grove and Jarvis Street School for boys in Toronto. "Retarded" these schools are expensive," she said, "but for the lives made, it is well worth the expense. To keep these persons in penal institutions is much more expensive."

Under present conditions the only training available is "on the job" training, she said. "The person can find an employer. These children are for the most part, eager to please but unfortunately their jobs are short-lived and so many are with idle hands. Often they end up in penal institutions," she added.

"As a member of an Association for Retarded Children I have seen the Simple Training in Home Economics and Shop Work pay off," she said. "The more severely retarded
