

Georgetown Animal 'Clinic' Is Just That

Dr. Zavitz operating on cat.

Is it the cat's pyjamas? No, but it is a sheet over a sleeping cat, in fact she's out like a light.

The cat, anesthetized by veterinarian Dr. Vicki Zavitz, was to have an ovariectomy performed, or in plainer language she was being spayed. It is easier on the man of the house than getting rid of kittens.

Performing such an operation is routine for Dr. Zavitz, who ministers to all animals, large or small, at the Georgetown Animal Clinic on Guelph Street, where a large map hangs on the wall with pegs showing most of the farms in the area. This way, if a bossy neighbour needs help, her obstetrician doesn't need to take the time for long, involved directions to the farm.

Meanwhile back at the operating table, the cat has been weighed, caressed gently and held by Dr. Zavitz, while Dr. Brian Footman gave her an injection to put her to sleep. Small ropes were tied around her paws, holding her flat on her back and electric clippers removed the fur from the operative area.

Here's where the sterilized sheet with the hole in it appears. It is draped over the cat, with only the necessary area exposed.

However, treatment of that is they do alternate, and it is not part of our job," says Dr. Footman.
