Four Team Grouping For Industrial Hockey

enough together that one can be seen from the next sign, so trespassers have no excuse for being on the private land, he added.

Mr. Reid said the best way to keep up the farmer-hunter relationship was for hunters to ask at the farmhouse if they wish to hunt, take the farmer's advice about where and what to hunt, and remain on that farmer's property. Often an over-zealous hunter who has permission to hunt on a 10-acre field will wander into a neighbour's by mistake.

Gun and sportsman clubs in Halton are not at fault, the hunter critic reports. All members of bona-fide local clubs appreciate the farmer's cooperation with such clubs and will always ask permission to seek game on a farm. Mostly to blame are the parties of city dwellers who know little about local regulations and care less about courtesy.

Hunting Clubs Not to Blame

Various hunting seasons are open in Halton this week and across the county the cry has already started to be heard above the hanging of guns.

"What can we do to keep hunters off private property?"

Angry homeowners, invaded by gangs of city hunters have burnt up the telephone lines to the Game Warden and Provincial Police with complaints of bullets whizzing by cattle, houses and even children.

We aren't even safe in our own back yard - one district mother complained. At other reported bullets ricocheting off the house.

Campbell, the man lost a dog on pet ducks he kept in a private pond near the house.

From east and west, north and south, the complaints pour in.

Halton's Game Warden, B. M. Reid, said he had received dozens of complaints, most of which he had personally checked out. However, he can only lay a charge if the hunters do not have the proper "99 out of 100" tags. But if the person wants tags, passing charges laid against the invaders, the landowner must personally press a charge, and the matter usually is dropped when the owner learns he must appear in court to prosecute.

The Game Warden did charge two men with jackknifing near Terra Cotta last week. He reports no shooting incidents involving humans.

If a resident wishes to lay a trespassing charge however they should call Provincial Police, as the Game Warden has no authority to institute such a charge.

Tips On Signs

The best way to keep hunters off your property is to erect "no hunting" or "no trespassing" signs around the perimeter of the property (including the back 50' not just along the road). Signs should be placed close
