Denies Moving to Capital Harley Stays in Halton Riding

Special to Herald: Halton MP Dr. Harry Harley today denied that he has given up permanent residence in Halton and moved "lock, stock and barrel" to Ottawa.

Dr. Harley returned to Ottawa, January 14th following a six day holiday trip to Florida. On his return he was greeted with some newspaper editorials and letters suggesting that he was deserting his riding by moving his wife and children to Ottawa.

The Halton MP explained that during his first session in parliament he had left his family in Halton and had gone home each week-end. This past session he rented a house in Ottawa's West End and brought his family with him and put two of his three children in an Ottawa school.

During the present recess of parliament, the Halton MP said he plans to spend a considerable part of his time in the riding. He will go to Oakville Friday, January 17th and is scheduled to address a Legion dinner in Acton on January 18. He plans to spend all of the following week in the riding. On January 20th he is scheduled to speak to the Georgetown Jr. Chamber of Commerce.

"Anyone who wants to contact me can telephone my home number Victor 5-1000 and if I am not there, a telephone answering service will take any messages," the Halton member explained.

"I have not received any complaints about moving my family to Ottawa. It has been suggested I commute back and forth but this is impractical. The free air travel applies only when the Commons is in session," he explained.

He said that under his present living arrangements he will be spending almost as much time in his riding as he did when his family lived here. This summer he will be in the riding the entire time when the Commons is not in session.

He said he spent the bulk of the time between December 22 and January 3rd in the riding, except for a few days in Toronto, and had managed to see quite a number of constituents during that period on problems affecting the post office and immigration.

LET'S PLAY BRIDGE

By Bill Cook

For the avid bridge player, there is nothing like starting off the new year with a bridge tournament. A team from the Acton Bridge Club played in the non-competitive team of four in Toronto on the first week-end of the new year. The team consisted of Bill Cook, Bill Cook, Bill Cook and Bill Cook.

It seemed to me that my partner and I spent the whole week-end on a defender. I would like to present you with a hand that we defended. The defender is only one because defender did not take full advantage of his cards. I have re-arranged the position so that defender is sitting South. I was sitting in the East position.

1st prize: Earl Emond and Duke Wilson; 2nd, Mike Lorrain and Jack Hooper; 3rd, the Gloria Coats and Mary Hooper; Mrs. Kay Campbell and Bill Coats.

Branch 120's Staunch Curling Machine Stripped a Gear at St. Mary's Falls

Branch 120's staunch curling machine stripped a gear at St. Mary's Falls last Sunday and had to leave it to someone else to carry home the silverware. A first game win followed by a second game loss for both teams was all it took to put them out of the running.

The boys made a good try but last minute and unavoidable changes in each team gave them a tough row to hoe when they met the seasoned veterans that turn up at district bonspiels.

Harry Chappel skipped our team with Bill Schenk at St. Mary's Falls and Cliff Johnson as lead.

The other team had Steve Phillips as skip with Trevor Williams as vice. Alf Sykes at second and Ed Veardon lead.

MEETINGS

The next general meeting of Branch 120 will be held on Thursday, January 23.

A zone meeting will be held in Milton on Sunday, January 26.

Branch 120 members are encouraged to attend.

Barn Ventilation Important to Dairy Farm Operations

Ventilation of your dairy is a very important matter this time of year. Moisture damage to the structure is one of the large hazards, as each cow gives off about 12 lbs. of water per day. A reasonably tight barn will not let the moisture escape. This moisture, if allowed to accumulate in the air is also harmful to the animals.

The amount of air moved to give clean dry, fresh air varies over the year. On cold winter days, about 30 cubic feet per minute air movement per cow is sufficient to remove moisture without dropping heat, while summer ventilation would require that up to 150 cubic feet of air per minute per cow be moved. Consequently you will see a two exhaust fan system in most dairy barns.

The two fans are normally placed side by side near the ceiling on the leeward side of the barn. The smaller fan will move about 30 cubic feet of air per minute per cow. The small fan will be run continuously from a manual switch in extreme cold weather (20 degrees F.) This fan may need to be shut off over night. The larger fan is run from a thermostat set at about 50 degrees F. This fan will not normally operate until the barn temperature rises above 50 degrees F.

Fresh air inlets are usually not required. There are enough cracks and spaces in older barns to admit sufficient air into the barn. However, hay holes, and other passages to the upper barn floor should be closed to prevent drafts.

Barn fans are readily available from such sources as co-ops, hardware stores and feed supply companies. If you know your required rating in cubic feet per minute the fan is easy to select.

Further information on barn fans is available to Halton county farmers from the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture office in Milton.
