John has been around since 1900 as & player, a manager, a team executive and finally a league and provincial baseball execulive.

Now 71, he has seen this part of southern Ontario undergo tremendous changes and baseball - he says -- has deteriorated. "Right until the end of the last war baseball was really a community effort," explaine Johnson. "Players stayed with the game year after year and built a club - just like in Campbellville now. Most players only stay with the game a couple of years now," he added. And Johnson maintains the Oakville teams he played on would have beaten the pants off the best of the teams fielded by Camp-hellville in the past dec-But Johnson isn't just another old-timer moaning about the good old days. He claims the decline of baseball is pretty well confined to Ontario. "Baseball is better in the United States now," he claims. "These little leagues and legion baseball are helping produce more good ball players." Time was when Oakvilla supported their flocal ball club well, both in the stands and in the pocket-

"In 1924, there were .just 3,000 people in Oakville, but we never had under 500 people at a game. I can remember having as many as 1,500 penple watch us at Victoria (now Wallace) Park," he goes on.

According to Johnson, the 1947 Oaks were the last great Oakville team, but couldn't hold a candle to the 1924 squad. All the same, they won the OBA Intermediate B Title.

Their lineup had Norm Carter at first base, Sid Brown and Harry Ridley at second, Cliff, Post und Blake Tuck at third, Paul Gilliam at short, and Ray Patterson catching.
