Industrial Commissioner Terms Group 'A Farce'

Appearing before Council Monday night, Bill Cumpsty, a member of the Industrial Commission, charged that the Industrial Commission has accomplished "absolutely nothing."
He told of spending a whole day in town with R. Radford of the Department of Economics and Development. He quoted Mr. Radford as saying he had brought twenty-eight industrialists here since May 1964, with thirteen of them establishing elsewhere. "Not because of lack of cooperation with either the developer or councillors", he maintained, "but because they go home and check on the town and find out about the bad publicity." Mr. Cumpsty, returning to the Industrial Commission question, stated he had received no minutes of the meeting and reiterated his charge saying, "It's a farce."
He then asked Coun. Young if a meeting had been set with Mr. Heelop and had he agreed to establish a fixed price for the 100 acres of industrial land, which is supposed to be dedicated to the town.
"This price will be established at a meeting with Council, the Industrial Commission and the developer", retorted Coun.
J. Young. "This meeting will be arranged by our solicitor V.
Helson, then he will contact me."
Coun. Young went on to say that in his two years of council only four industrialists had been here, as far as he knew.
"The rest I haven't seen."
Heave J. Elliott explained that as Secretary-Treasurer of the Industrial Commission he wrote up the minutes and sent them out one week before the next meeting, "since the next meeting is October 22, I haven't sent them out yet", he added.
Continuing, he remarked, "If I felt the Commission was a farce I wouldn't serve on it.
If this goes out over Brampton radio station tomorrow — it means more bad publicity for the town", he concluded.
Mayor J. Gibbons lauded
Mr. Cumpsty as a good citizen.
Turning to council, he challenged, "Are there any members in Council who have contributed to bad publicity? Let's not continue nonsense like tape recording machines", he went on, "let's throw all that in the dump. We're going to get good publicity, lower taxes and unity", he concluded.
Councillor W. Smith took his turn, "Cumpsty repeated almost word for word what I said four months ago when I was a member of the Commission — it is doing nothing".
He advocated the Commission be made up entirely of people outside of Council — a cross section of the town. He challenged the commission to find out why the thirteen industrialists settled elsewhere. "It's the only way we can find the remedy," he claimed.
Deputy Reeve Hunter remarked that he hadn't even heard of eight industrial enquiries, far less twenty-eight, and neither had the Industrial Commission.
It was decided to write Mr.
Radford asking who they were,
and where they settled, and if possible why they settled where they did.
