

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM AS SCHOOL BOILERS ARE SAFE

The recent storm stirred up in Metro because of school boiler rooms being unattended for hours at a time prompted Georgetown public school trustee Harry Shortill to explain the local situation and dispel any worries which may have arisen among parents here as a result.

Mr. Shortill said boilers of 200 h.p. or more must be attended full time, and 75 h.p. units or over require someone in attendance at least 45 minutes out of each hour.

Since all boilers in the Georgetown public schools are of 100 h.p. or less a minimum of attention is required and there is no cause for alarm here.

The Georgetown Ministerial Association the members of which conduct Religious Education in the Georgetown Public Schools have been carrying on their program in their schools without permission this term - but the oversight was quickly set right at the board final meeting of 1964.

A letter from ministerial association's secretary pointed out the annual request for permission to teach religion in the schools had not been made this term in error. The board unanimously carried a motion to authorize the clergy's visits to the schools.

The ministers spend approximately a half hour in each school weekly giving religious instruction.

Objectors are given the option to be absent from the religious instruction periods if they wish.

A George Kennedy Home and School Association offer to pay a large percentage of the cost of a film projector for Kennedy school was declined by the Georgetown public school board Wednesday, Dec. 7 after discussion on who would actually own the unit.

The probability of the board outfitting all schools not already including projectors, among their teaching aids with such equipment influenced the decision.

Expressing the board's gratitude in response to the Home and School Association's offer chairman Stan Vinlay said, "I would suggest that the home and school group look to something else to buy since projectors are not looked on as a frill any more but as an essential and therefore responsibility of the board to provide."
