Limehouse, Pineview Schools Additions in Planning Stage

The ever growing need for new schools was pointed up sharply at an Esqueping Council Monday night, when a by-law to finance two almost complete school additions, and approval for two more proposed additions, were passed.

Esqueping School Board appeared before council requesting the tentative approval of additions at both Pineview and Limehouse schools. Plans call for two classrooms and one general purpose room at each school.

Board Chairman Mrs. Shirley Armstrong pointed out that the general purpose room will be used as a classroom when necessary. She claimed no extensions to boilers or radiators would be needed since the school was designed originally for additions.

In reply to Reeve G. Leslie, the Chairman stated, "The cost is estimated, very roughly, at $60,000, on which there will be a grant of $80,000."

The two year projected enrollment is 1375. At the 35 recommended maximum per room, a need for forty nine classrooms is shown.

"Well, we know you need the space, so we might as well go ahead and approve it," commented Coun. G. Currie. Consequently a motion was passed approving a motion was passed approval for the addition of two rooms at Pineview and Limehouse schools.

The second motion regarding schools was to authorize temporary borrowing until the $112,213 debentures were issued for the almost completed three room additions to Glen Williams and Stewarttown schools.

This debenture was reduced from its original amount of $157,460 to the present $112,213.

The five thousand dollar, plus a six hundred dollar car allowance, proposed by the Credit Valley Conservation Authority for their chairman, was turned down by Esqueping Council since they felt the figure was too high.

The proposal is being submitted to all the municipalities in the Credit Valley watershed.

Building permits valued at $41,000 were issued in Esqueping during February, Building Inspector William Hullis reported to Council. All the permits were for dwellings.

respective duties of the municipalities, conservation authority and the Emergency Measures Organization must be forthcoming before another emergency arises.

This time the Authority went ahead with work for which it had no authority. We stuck our necks out but there was no alternative at a time of emergency. Before another comes up we must have the cooperation of all the municipalities to get this situation straightened out.

This, too, would be covered in any agreement with the municipalities for the CVCA to be responsible for the river.

Members were asked to discuss the idea of giving the CVCA full control of the river with their respective councils. Any decision would form the basis for discussion at a meeting of all concerned in the near future.

Must Have Power to Act If River Load Shouldered

"We can't go half way; either the Authority will have full responsibility for the river or else accept no responsibility whatsoever," R. R. Parker said at last week's Credit Valley Conservation Authority meeting. "We have been asked 'who is responsible' and this will have to be determined. My suggestion is that the CVCA be made responsible for any problems on the river—not because the Authority particularly wants this but is in a better position to judge and make a decision on the basis of overall conditions." Mr. Parker is chairman of the Flood Control and Pollution Advisory Board of the CVCA.

"However," Mr. Parker continued, "municipal Councils must remember that if the Credit Valley Conservation Authority accepts responsibility then it must have the power to do so. If this scheme is adopted then the Authority would have the right to enter on private lands to execute any phase. Everyone has been most co-operative in this emergency but at another time snags might develop. All conservation authorities labor under the same cloud of uncertainty and this should be cleared up as soon as possible."

The discussion which prompted this statement followed a presentation from delegates from Huttonville flood area who attended the meeting to find out if any compensation could be expected for damages there.

"Work is proceeding to clear up this untenable situation," Chairman R. K. McMillan told the assembled ratepayers. "It is my intention to find out who is actually responsible. Clarification of the

The Apple Products have finished their main production for the season. A few are still employed producing what they call the 'fresh slice', which is shipped to many well known bakeries and restaurants for their fresh apple pie. Tarts and sandwiches were also served. They presented her with a money tree for which she thanked them all.
