

THE GEORGETOWN GARDENER

Begonias are Colourful Decorations for Garden

by Gordon Lindsay Smith

It's possible, of course to develop a garden or build a house without some sort of a plan, but there will be more satisfaction and pleasure if we do have one. And these garden plans can be as simple or elaborate as we desire. Some people even go so far as to draw the whole thing to scale, fit plants into this layout according to their mature height and width, match up colors, keep a precise record of planting, blooming and maturity dates from year to year, and they can string off variety names just like a good political speaker can reel off statistics. It is fine for those who like it. But the new gardener doesn't have to bother with such voluminous data. All that he needs to know is whether a flower is hardy or tender, and whether it grows which is right side up for few inches or a few feet. The rest he can learn pleasantly as he goes along.

One of the most satisfactory flowers for brightening up dark corners is the tuberous rooted begonia and for a lot of really magnificent bloom the bulbs should be bought and started now. These bulbs are fairly expensive but with a little care they can be used over and over again.

For the average householder the best way to start is in a flat box about three inches deep or shallow four inch flower pot. Fill these with damp peat moss and keep damp and place bulb root side down covering almost—but not quite completely. If one is not sure when buying. Keep the flat in a moderately lighted window, facing the east is best, and when new sprouts are well started transplant to individual five or six inch pots filled with good soil, and keep these until transplanted outside after all danger of frost is over, which means June 1st in most of Canada. Care must be exercised in handling as the stems are very brittle. The flowers are of brilliant coloring and they face the same direction as the first permanent leaves point.

Begonias will grow or burn sun no more than four or five hours a day. Along an east wall or hedge is ideal but they will bloom and do well with a western or even north exposure and under trees.

After the first frost, the bulb should be dug up; brought indoors and spread out somewhere to dry. After cleaning stems and roots they should be packed in vermiculite or "dry peat moss" moistened very slightly and stored in a cool part of the basement.

George Town Bell Exchange Added 102 Phones in Year

The Bell Telephone Re-year (1955) also net report for 1955, mailed in Feb.-cordas.

rary to shareholders in the Georgetown area, has facts from the Company's inception in 1880; until 1913— to reach and figures that may be interesting to customers and others as well.

Take the number of telephones added to the networks during the First World War last year, for example—222, including 102 in Georgetown. This is almost as many as serve the entire Ottawa-Hull metropolitan area, and is the third time in Company history that over 200,000 telephones were added in a single year.

Company had 4.3 million telephones in service, reaching virtually every office and estimated 92% of households in Ontario, Quebec, Labrador and the Northwest Territories.

Year after year the proportion of telephones in homes has been creeping up, compared to those in business use. In 1954, for example, 70.6% of our telephones were in homes, compared with 70.5% in 1953, and 59% in 1952.

Hed Cross volunteer hospital visitors remember our hospital veterans by bringing them good cheer and company during regular bedside visits throughout the year.
