While we're on the topic of St. Patrick's Day, have you ever really wondered why the Irish wear green? Then we'll be teelin' ye: According to legend, Ireland was overrun with frogs many years ago. The Irish didn't know how to get rid of them until at last a wise old Irishman told them to import hundreds of snakes which would eventually est up all the frogs.

They brought in a great number of snakes. In a short time, the frogs began to disappear. After a time, however, the snakes became so numerous that they became a worse pest than the frogs. They then decided to import monkeys which would kill the snakes. This they did with satisfying results. The snakes began to
