THE GEORGETOWN GARDENER

Can't Buy This Kind

by Gordon Lindsay Smith
R. R. 1 Georgetown

"Why should I bother to grow vegetables when I can buy them cheaply?"

How often do you hear that from the man who has never grown any vegetables and certainly who has never eaten any just out of the garden.

The vegetables one buys are not at all the same as the vegetables one grows. There is nothing quite so perishable as garden freshness, and especially when it comes to things like carrots and peas. Actually corn and peas lose their real fresh flavour in a matter of hours. For the very best quality they should be picked just when they are at their tender best, cooked lightly, if they have to be cooked, and eaten immediately. That's impossible, of course, when they have to be transported hundreds of miles. Experienced gardeners, even in the

Recalls Brother's Loss In Athabaskan Sinking

"My brother was about due for leave to come home," recalled a Brampton woman, "when he was killed aboard the Athabaskan, a naval destroyer based off the coast of France."

Speaking of AB Victor Miller, a Georgetown sailor, who died when a torpedo struck the Athabaskan 21 years ago today, was a sister, Mrs. Audrey Lynne. "He was in one battle after another from the day he left port at Halifax," she recalled. "His letters kept reading, 'see you soon' and that he was due for leave."

The Athabaskan was one of four in the Tribal class commissioned during the Second World War. The others were the Inroquois, Huron and Haida. "My brother always liked watching ships when he was a boy," Mrs. Lynne related of Miller's earlier life in Herwick on Tweed near the Scottish and English border. "The ship he died on was built at Newcastle-on-Tyne, near our home in Scotland."

An attempt is being made by a handful of men, who believe Canada owes a form of memorial to those who died at sea, to preserve the sister ship Haida. They plan to display the destroyer at a site adjacent to the Canadian National Exhibition grounds in Toronto as a national naval memorial, with the names of wartime dead inscribed on plaques.

"It is a wonderful idea to preserve the Haida," said Mrs. Lynne, "for there are no monuments for those who lost their lives in the navy. As Haida is the same class as the Athabaskan, it will represent all who died aboard it."

A former Georgetown man, George Greygoose, Toronto, who on deck on the Haida when the Athabaskan was torpedoed during a joint effort to sink two German destroyers off the French coast near Ile de Viegre. "As there were a few men from Toronto aboard the Athabaskan and the Haida," he said, "the preserving of the Haida is a good move. It will bring back a lot of memories to veterans and relatives of those who lost their lives."

Mr. Greygoose, stationed on the gunnery deck, when the Athabaskan was struck, said the Haida was struck later the same night, killing two.

"They were good ships with lots of speed," said Mr. Greygoose of the Tribal class ships.

Overseas Junior Farmer Planning Visit to Halton

The boys had two speakers from the Oakville Humane Society.

The joint meeting opened with the Junior Farmer Song followed by the minutes of the last meeting. Program scheduled were handed out to each member present. It was announced that Carleton County will not be visiting Halton county on April 23, 24, and 25 as originally scheduled, but will come some time during the summer.

The Junior Farmer Church Service will take place on Sunday, May 9th at the Knox Presbyterian Church in Milton. The Guest speaker will be Alex Cannel, president of the Ontario Junior Farmers and the offering will go to the Crippled Children. Terms Jail Dungen Supports Tri-County

Halton County M.E.A. George Kerr says the County Jail at Milton is nothing more than a "dungeon" and he was glad county council is still considering the approval of the provincial government's proposal for a regional jail for Hamilton, Wentworth and Halton.

"The jail at Milton was built in 1878, and is nothing more than a dungeon," Mr. Kerr stated this week.

He added, "I note that the recent Grand Jury report indicated that the County jail needs repairs from top to bottom."

He stressed the proposed $1,000,000 regional detention and classification centre would include facilities for psychiatrists, probation officers, clergy and barristers to interview and assist inmates.

Mr. Kerr said maximum and minimum security areas will be established so that the first young offenders would be segregated and the training facilities would be segregated and the institution would include training facilities, workshops and a general rehabilitation program.

"This new proposal is not mollycoddling. It is common sense and human investment."

"It is my opinion that the cost of this new institute will be much less for the County of Halton than if it would have to build a new jail alone or attempt to join with one other county," Mr. Kerr stated.
